Douglas Outlines Filibuster Fight

Doubtful Of Success Before 1959

WASHINGTON (AP)—Civil rights advocates Saturday set their sights on a change in the Senate's filibuster rule as their next major objective. But they conceded they may have to wait until January 1959 to get it.

Sen. Douglas (D-Ill.), who headed five Democratic senators pledging maximum efforts to alter the present rule, said he doubts they will have much success in 1958.

Counterspy Foresees Khrushchev's Fall

WASHINGTON (AP)—Counterspy Boris Morros foresees the fall of Soviet Communist party Boss Nikita Khrushchev within the next eight months.

He predicts that the successor will be military dictatorship headed by Marshal Georgi Zhukov.

Morros' forecasts, in closed testimony to the House Committee on Un-American Activities, were made public by Chairman Walter (D-Pa.) Saturday as the committee issued brief biographical sketches of Zhukov and Ivan Konev.

Mussolini Buried 11 Years After Violent Death

PREDAPPIO, Italy (AP)—Benito Mussolini was buried in his family crypt Saturday to the stiff salutes of a few Fascist blackshirts. The Duce's widow stood by weeping.

Thus the bull-necked blacksmith's son who shocked off the poverty of this tiny mountain village birthplace to rule Italy like a Caesar was laid to rest 11 years after his violent death.

Fearing that even the mutilated body of Mussolini might serve as a rallying point for diehard Fascists, the government kept it hidden in a zinc-lined crate behind the altar of a rural Catholic monastery at Cerro Maggiore, 15 miles northwest of Milan.

This game of hide-and-seek with the Fascists ended Friday when the body was brought to this village 40 miles from Florence in a plain-colored, plain wooden casket. Mussolini's brain was in a separate jar.

About 500 persons came to hear the three masses said for Mussolini. Several hundred wore the black shirts dating from the days when Mussolini marched on Rome in 1922.

They stood at each corner of the coffin in rigid Roman guard, rendering their stiff Roman salute as they changed shifts every half hour.

Kneeling before the tomb, they gave this pledge: "We swear that we will continue to follow the teachings of Il Duce."

The 70-year-old widow, Donna Rachele, forsaken by Mussolini in his last years for his mistress, Clara Petacci, had spent years pleading with the government to return the body to the family.

The village took the funeral calmly. When the first funeral mass began there were more people shopping in the town market than were in the cemetery.

Mussolini and his mistress were caught by partisans near Milan as they fled northward toward the border April 28, 1945. They were slain and their bodies were hung head down for 30 hours in front of a Milan filling station.

Scene of the last stagecoach robbery in the old Northwest is the old stage road to Lake George, in Michigan's upper peninsula. The holiday took place in 1839.

Zhukov is the present Soviet minister of defense and a World War II associate of Gen. Eisenhower. Marshall Konev is deputy minister of defense and holds other top military jobs.

The committee depicted the Red army as a growing power in Soviet affairs. It said army dissatisfaction with former Premier Malenkov's policy of backing production for consumers vs. heavy industry led to Malenkov's ouster and his replacement by Khrushchev.

Zhukov and Konev in turn were described by the committee as potential rivals in the continuing Kremlin power struggle.

Morros cited Zhukov's rise to top defense and party posts as evidence that Russia is rapidly becoming a military dictatorship.

Morros, the composer and movie director recently revealed as a veteran U.S. counterspy, also was quoted as testifying that individual Soviet spy organizations formerly operated by a variety of Red government agencies have now been consolidated into one super-agency under the Red army directly responsible to Zhukov.

Walter said in an accompanying statement that the Soviet shift of power to the military signals an acute danger to the West.

"We can expect an immediate acceleration in Soviet armament, plus a readiness on the part of the Soviet leadership to back up their political ambitions with armed force," Walter said.

"Historically the ascendancy of military rule has foreshadowed imminent armed conflict. The paralysis of the London disarmament talks and the arrogant rejection by the Soviets of all real Western peace proposals indicate that this sequence is likely to ensue again now."

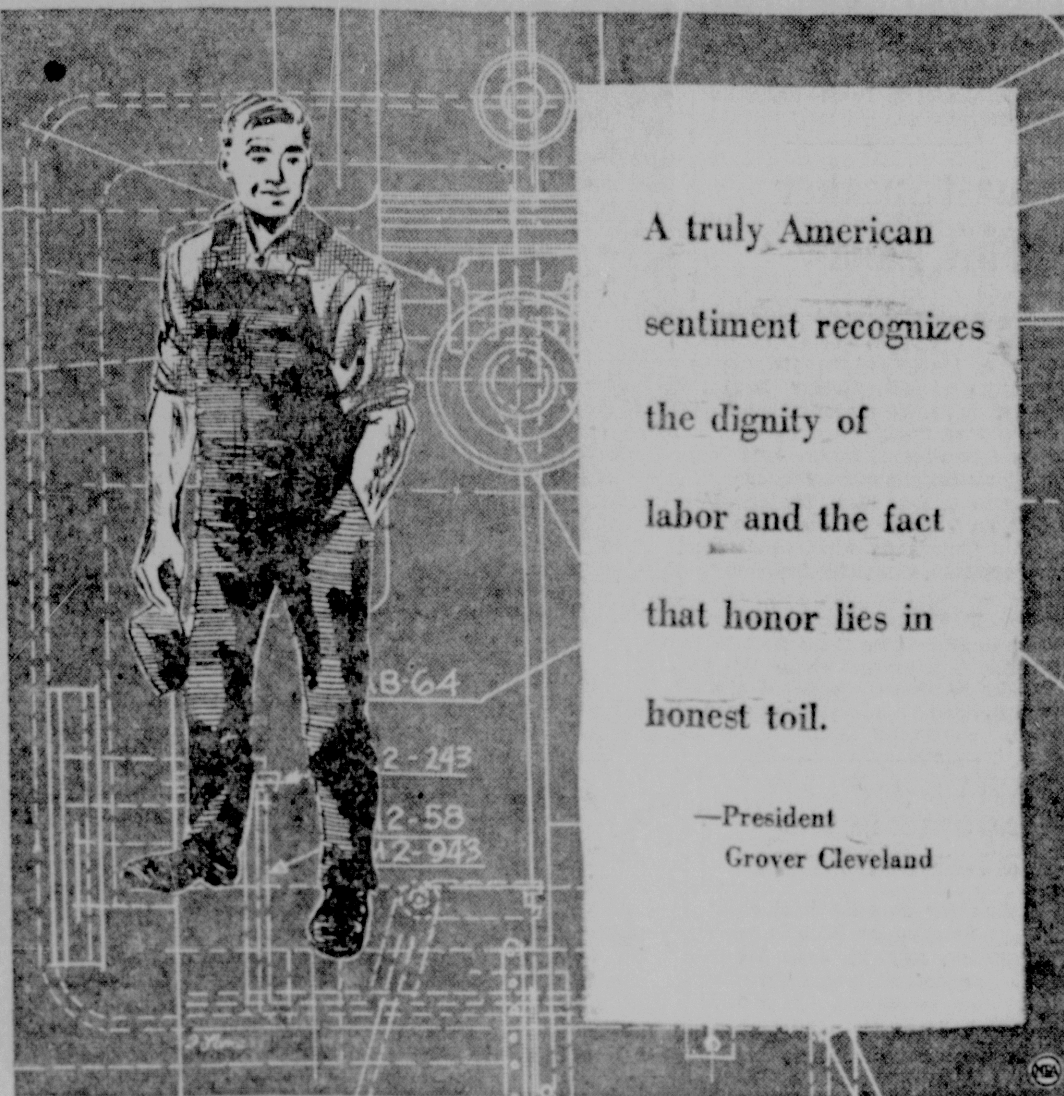

"The malevolent careers of Zhukov and Konev make it inconceivable that they be dealt with as honorable men by any head of state in the free world."

TIME EXTENDED FOR CLERGYMEN TO ENTER S.S.
WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower Saturday signed a bill extending for two years the time in which clergymen can choose to go under the social security program as self-employed persons.

The law would also allow a minister to include in computing his earnings for social security purposes the value of free meals and lodging furnished him and the rental value of his parsonage.

This could result in increasing his social security benefits. The ministers have until April 15, 1959, to make their choice.

Highway Fatalities Move Past 100 Mark In First Day Of Holiday

Holiday Deaths at a Glance
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Traffic 133
Drowning 15
Miscellaneous 19
Total 167

Violent deaths on U.S. roads moved past the 100 mark in the first full day of the Labor Day weekend—a rate higher than anticipated by safety officials.

Motorists turned to the highways by the million to enjoy the last holiday weekend of the summer. They were cautioned by one safety expert to use the brakes on their autos.

The National Safety Council estimated last week that traffic accidents would cost 430 lives during the 72-hour holiday period from 6 p. m., Friday, to midnight Monday.

Ned H. Dearborn, Council president said: "We are concerned over the pace of the early toll, which will exceed our estimate unless the drivers slow on the brakes."

The Council's estimate of 420 was well under the all-time Labor Day weekend traffic record of 461 deaths in 1951, as well as last year's Labor Day traffic death count of 435 for the three-day period.

Last Labor Day the over-all toll from accidental deaths was 396. Besides the 435 traffic victims, there were 89 persons drowned and 72 killed in all other types of accidents.

A non-holiday test survey covering a 72-hour weekend period from 6 p. m., Friday, Aug. 16, to midnight Monday, Aug. 19, this year, counted 567 accident deaths—258 in traffic, 82 from drowning, and 87 in miscellaneous accidents.

The deadliest Labor Day weekend in history in terms of all sorts of accidents, was that in 1951 when the toll was 638.

A new Illinois speed limit law and the addition of 150 state policemen to highway patrols were cited Saturday by a safety official as factors that may aid in holding down traffic death toll over the Labor Day weekend.

Robert Campbell, state traffic safety coordinator, said in Springfield that he believes the traffic toll will fall short of the 26 killed last year in the three-day holiday weekend. Campbell said the decrease may be better than 20 per cent.

He based this estimate, he said, on a 26 per cent decline in traffic fatalities recorded in July—the first month the new speed limits went into effect.

New state laws limit speeds on most state highways to 60 m.p.h. (Continued on page 11)

DAS HOTZEN WURD. SMOKEN-SCHNORTEN

OMAHA (AP)—U.S. Air Force researchers recently compiled an English-German glossary of such clear terms that defined a rocket engine as a "Henschel-Hitler" and a clear warhead as "das darschschlitten lauden boomer."

The Air Force editor prompted Wally Provoost, sports editor of the Omaha World-Herald, and Nate Nielsen, courthouse reporter for the same paper, to devise a similar glossary for baseball. Some of their suggestions are:

Swinging strike—das kornerchen hittenboer.
Umpire—das blindebschitt dunkopf vos schepktakele geneds.

Stolen base—das schloeken run und zleid zu bioten kachertwort.
Pitch—das hotzen wurde mit schwingenarme.

Troops Participate In Test Of Powerful Nuclear Device

ATOMIC TEST SITE, Nev. (AP)—Nuclear age infantrymen Saturday staged a mock assault on an enemy supposedly blasted by an atomic bomb twice as powerful as the one that devastated Hiroshima in 1945.

The specially trained troops hopped into action on a half after a nuclear test device went off with a shattering explosion that lit up the western sky for hundreds of miles with a brilliant blue light.

The 700-foot tower on which the bomb had rested was vaporized. First flickered up on the shrub-covered hills two miles from the blast site. Observers 14 miles away said they felt a sharp blow from the shock-wave. The dazzling blue light was seen clearly in Los Angeles, 300 miles to the southwest, and in San Francisco, more than 400 miles to the north.

Test officials said the device yielded power equivalent to 40,000 tons of TNT. The bomb dropped on Hiroshima at the end of World War II was equal to 20,000 tons of TNT.

The intense blue light accompanying the blast was said to be caused largely by atmospheric conditions.

Huddled in trenches 5,000 yards from ground zero—just over five miles—were some 700 men, including a crack infantry platoon from Canada. The Canadians, members of the Queen's Own Rifles, were the first troops other than those from the United States to participate directly in such maneuvers at the Nevada testing grounds.

Originally scheduled to be only 4,500 yards from the blast site, the troops were moved back when a last-minute weather check indicated there would be heavy fallout closer up.

The military exercises began after radiation detection crews pronounced the forward area free from contamination. Forty helicopters which had been waiting behind a row of hills several miles behind the troops, roared in to begin an airlift to the area immediately surrounding the blast site.

The maneuver was described as an operation to repel an invader who has landed in the United States.

The helicopters moved the equipment and supplies to the troops. (Continued on Page Eleven)

Mount Hope, W. Va. Bank Cashier, $32,095 Missing

MOUNT HOPE, W. Va. (AP)—Missing from the bank of Mount Hope, a cashier, and $32,094.99 in cash from the vault.

Loss of the cash was officially confirmed Saturday by the bank's president, Ronald Snyder.

Cashier W. G. Potter, 37, a respected employee of the bank since 1922, has been missing since Tuesday night.

The FBI in Pittsburgh said a complaint was filed before U.S. Commissioner Winton A. Riffe of Beckley, W. Va., charging Potter with embezzling the bank's funds. A federal warrant has been issued for his arrest.

After Potter's disappearance, which was reported to police Wednesday morning by his wife, it was discovered that the bank vault had been time-locked.

The mechanism had been set for the maximum period of 72 hours, and the vault doors did not swing open again until a few minutes past 8 o'clock Friday night.

Yates Sees Little Chance Of Water Diversion In 1958

WASHINGTON (AP)—An attempt by Illinois congressmen to try to talk Canada out of opposing increased water diversion from Lake Michigan has been scuttled again by the State Department.

Rep. Yates (D-Ill.) said Saturday: "All we can do now is wait for word from Canada," he told a reporter.

Yates, a principal supporter of the bill that would permit Chicago to take more water from the lake, indicated chances of the measure becoming law next year are not bright.

Similar bills were passed in 1954 and 1956 but were vetoed each time by President Eisenhower. Both vetoes were on the basis of State Department recommendations following objections by Canada.

This year's bill was passed by the House last May, but Senate action was deferred until next year.

Rep. Thomas J. O'Brien (D-Ill.), dean of the state's congressional delegation, recently asked Eisenhower to urge the State Department to permit an Illinois congressman to talk to Canadian officials in an attempt to remove their objections.

Earlier this year, the State Department said no to a direct request by the Illinois delegation.

Yates said I. Jack Martin, White House aide, has informed him the State Department again turned down the request.

40 YEARS WITH SNEEZUM JUST TOO MUCH
SPSWICH, England (AP)—Gordon Sneezum changed the family name Saturday.

"When you have to live with that name for 40 years," he said, "the jokes wear a little thin and the corny remarks become a bore."

So he had a court change the name to Belle—his wife's maiden name.

Five Airmen Die In C124 Crash

Illinois Man Among Casualties

EL PASO, Tex. (AP)—A huge Air Force Globemaster transport plane, attempting an instrument landing during a driving rainstorm, crashed and burned Saturday, killing five airmen and injuring 10 others.

The four-engine C124, attached to the 1st Strategic Squadron at Biggs Air Force Base here, crashed about two miles northeast of El Paso International Airport at 1:45 a.m.

U.S. Spending Picture Beclouded Despite Cuts By Congress

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress made the biggest cuts in appropriations bills in five years this session but whether this will mean significant reductions in spending in the year ahead is not at all clear.

Despite the cuts voted in the session ending Friday, a tabulation showed today that the total of money bills passed was the highest for any year of the Eisenhower administration—$67,160,000,000.

The amount of the cut in appropriations was in disagreement because of different ways of figuring the slash made in foreign aid. The appropriations committees listed the total cut at $4,914,000,000; other sources made it about $5,400,000,000.

The key question, however, was what effect the cuts might have on the spending total of $71,800,000,000 forecast by President Eisenhower last January for fiscal 1958, which began July 1.

This budget was a record high for any peace-time year and it touched off a roar of economy protest, some of it within the administration.

There was general agreement among congressional fiscal experts that any cuts in spending would be far less than the reductions in appropriations made at this session.

The spending and appropriations budgets are not comparable. Only a part of the spending in any fiscal year is out of appropriations voted in the calendar year in which the fiscal year begins.

Much of it, often as much as one-third, comes from holdover appropriations from previous congresses.

One highly placed member of Congress said privately that the appropriations cuts this year would not reduce the $71,800,000,000. (Continued on Page Eleven)

Predict Sunshine For Labor Day

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Weather Bureau Saturday issued this outlook for Labor Day: "Widespread sunshine is forecast to greet the Labor Day dawn over the major portion of the nation except for early morning fog along the Pacific shore and considerable cloudiness along Gulf Coast regions."

"Fair weather will be emphasized during the afternoon over much of the country and remain so through the evening hours."

The Rev. Nathan Byrd, Baptist minister to students at the University of Virginia, performed the ceremony at the First Baptist Church.

Rebuilding before fall classes was impossible and so conversion was the only answer.

Four donated Missouri Pacific coach cars were stripped down and school desks, lighting and plumbing installed. Bottle gas will supply heat.

Red China Boots Out U.S. Student In Passport Deal

HONG KONG (AP)—An American student who refused to surrender his passport was bounced out of Red China Saturday night. He was quoted as saying the Peiping government was within its rights in ordering him to leave.

As Shelby Tucker headed north by train, 41 American companions continued their forbidden tour in the face of strong U.S. warnings.

Peiping radio said it could "only express deep regret that Shelby Tucker all along refused to respect the regulations of the Chinese authorities on foreigners in China."

Tucker was quoted in a Peiping dispatch by the British news agency, Reuters, as agreeing that "the Chinese are, from their point of view, legally correct in deporting me."

The young law student said he regretted missing a chance to see more of Red China and added that Chinese youth Federation officials had been "precisely correct" and polite in their dealings with him.

"I repeat that all along I have been told that I would not have to use my passport in coming to China," he said, "and as I and all other delegates were misled on this, either by the delegation organizers or the Chinese, I have had no choice but to refrain from using my passport in violation of restrictions clearly stated within."

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP)—Glenn Harold Stassen, son of presidential assistant Harold Stassen, was married Saturday to Miss Dorothy Jean Lively of Linville, Va.

CHEAP AT TWICE THE COST—You can move your home across the Mississippi River for just 60 cents, provided you go by way of the Eads Bridge, and if it will fit through the toll gate. The Crown Construction Co. of St. Louis found this out when they moved this home to East St. Louis, Ill. Workmen removed part of the eaves of the house and then they were held up by the toll collectors. The collectors checked their books, but couldn't find a specific charge for a house in transit. So they charged them four times the auto cost and sent them on their way.

Miss Louise Medlock Becomes Bride Of Warren Wright In Chapin Rites

MR. AND MRS. WARREN WRIGHT

Nuptial vows were exchanged in an impressive candlelight ceremony at seven-thirty o'clock Thursday evening, August 22, at the Christian Church in Chapin by Miss Louise Medlock of Chapin and Warren Wright of Alexander, Ill. The bride's father gave her in marriage.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Boston against a background of ferns and candelabra.

Margie Medlock, cousin of the bride, sang "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer" accompanied at the piano by Robert Wegehoff.

Attending the bride as matron of honor was her cousin, Mrs. Kenneth Medlock of Chapin.

Harold Wright of Jacksonville, brother of the groom, served as best man. Ronald Sanders of Thorntown, Ind., nephew of the bride, served as ring bearer. Cheryl Ann Medlock of Austin, Texas, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Tommy Medlock, twin brother of the bride, and Jerry Wright, brother of the groom served as ushers and lit the candles. Dean Wright and James Medlock also were ushers.

Gown Made By Aunt
The bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of embroidered nylon with a scalloped neckline and a tiered skirt which was made by her aunt, Mrs. Nellie Medlock. She wore a chapel length veil of silk illusion and carried a white Bible topped with white flowers.

Mrs. Medlock as matron of honor wore a gown of blue nylon net and lace with blue slippers and a blue crown headpiece and carried pale blue daisies.

The flower girl's gown was of pale blue organdy floor length, trimmed with white baby rose buds.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Medlock chose to wear a navy blue crepe and lace dress with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Mrs. Wright, mother of the groom, wore a navy blue dress with pink accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Reception At Church
Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the social room of the church. The table from which the guests were served cake, fruit punch, minis and nuts, was attractively decorated with pink candles and wedding bells. Pink streamers led to white hearts with miniature wedding rings embedded. The bride and groom cut the three tiered wedding cake.

Mrs. William Curtis and Mrs. Ann Johnson assisted with the serving of the cake. Mrs. Ada Wright and Mrs. Daisy Medlock assisted at the punch bowl.

When the newlyweds left for the honeymoon, the bride was wearing a beige sheath of silk shantung and white accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright will reside in Jacksonville where Mrs. Wright is employed at the National Yorkshire Registry, Inc. and Mr. Wright is associated with his brother in the trucking business in Alexander.

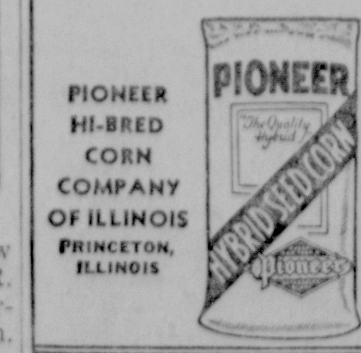

Store tomato juice in a covered container in the refrigerator with a few celery tops, allspice berries, peppercorns and some coarsely grated carrot. Strain and serve as a first course with cheese crackers.

Porch snack: gingerbread waffles with vanilla ice cream or whipped cream. If you want to go all-out, you can also offer butter-scotch or chocolate sauce; both of these flavors go well with the gingerbread.

Charleston, S. C. Faces Problem Of Preserving Cultural Heritage While In Midst Of Industrial Revolution

Editor's Note — To chart the enormous economic changes that are sweeping America, an experienced reporter visited four representative cities: Charleston, S. C., Fall River, Mass., Ravenswood, W. Va., and Rochester, N. Y. He talked to their city officials, their citizens and their businessmen. Here is his first story in a four-part series.

By RENE CAPPON
CHARLESTON, S. C. — The late Dubose Heyward, author of "Porgy" and one of Charleston's best known literary figures, once described his birthplace as "an ancient beautiful city that time forgot before it destroyed."

The sentence has the ring of an epitaph, but time has remembered the city and brought a rainbow of beguiling contrasts.

In economic vitality and patterns of change, Charleston may speak for the cities of the "New South." It is equally the inflexible spokesman for the very Old South. Its municipal problems resemble those of most growing cities—yet are more dramatic against the background of Charleston's stewardship over historic survivals that give the city a unique personality.

To the north, you find a swelling phalanx of factories. To the east and west, and northward also, you encounter conventional suburbs teeming with "new people," pushing steadily into the old plantation hinterland.

Yet inside the city of 70,000, enclosed on the lower half of a peninsula formed by the Ashley and Cooper rivers, you stroll into another century—the carefully insulated domain of lovely old dwellings, palm-tree-lined streets and antebellum shrines.

In these cramped residential districts with piazzas and gardens gleaming behind high walls and imposing gateways reigns a most unmetropolitan serenity. It seems a flat contradiction of Charleston's other face—that of a busy industrial center. For that is precisely what this old citadel of the Confederacy has become, Charleston, "too poor to paint and too proud to whitewash" for most of its post-Civil War period, is flourishing today.

In the last 10 years, the city has added more than 100 diversified industries, including sizeable ones, to its economic armory. It has seen family income more than double, industrial payrolls soar from 3 to 36 million dollars, bank clearings rise from 103 million in 1947 to 465 million last year.

The great harbor, which reverberated to the fateful cannonade of Ft. Sumter in 1861, has hugely increased its commerce, is now the 13th port in the nation and scheduled for an 18-million-dollar expansion program.

This is the new Charleston, the glory of its Chamber of Commerce (the country's oldest) and god-child of an industrial development board created by a group of young businessmen in 1945 to keep the war-propelled economy humming in peacetime.

Against it, the old Charleston—dating to 1670—has staunchly asserted its rights. The argument is more readily acceptable since geographical location rules out any industrial incursions inside the city itself.

The dualism is tempered also because those who are oriented toward economic advance and those stressing cultural preservation both find accommodation under the sheltering canopy of commonly prized tradition.

Nevertheless, Charleston's influential, if sometimes flutty preservation society—guardian of the city's unique architectural riches—has moments of unease. Be that as it may, when durable, three-term Mayor William

McG. Morrison speaks of the indisputable need for modern office buildings, he thinks of them along the waterfront, out of harm's way, and not on Broad Street, the ancient legal and financial hub.

Here change has found slender footing. Broad Street's fabric of activity seems gingerly woven around a framework of long lunches, ceremonial coffee breaks and morning appearances, considerably past crack of dawn.

Charleston may be an industrial city now, but it clings tenaciously to an unhurried way of doing things.

There is still courtesy, and a reluctance to jostle, and a friendly greeting on the street for a perfect stranger. And social amenities bordering on the overwhelming.

Charleston's intense communal consciousness supports a majestic web of more than 600 clubs, societies and associations, ranging from the fairly new Piping and Marching Society of Lower Chalmers Street to ancient, publicity-shy St. Cecilia's Society at the apex of the social pyramid.

The Piping and Marching Society neither pipes nor marches but discusses art, philosophy and science. St. Cecilia's annual ball is the prime social event of the season, but by long custom the society's activities are never covered by the local press. Name dropping, a St. Cecilia explains, might breed resentments.

Charleston prides itself on its hospitality, and its knack for absorbing new settlers into its civic life—a talent it is called upon to exercise more and more often.

But Charleston, while easy-going in daily intercourse, remains austere selective about formal alliances and here the great upsurge of newcomers has produced a note of edginess. Miss Josephine Pinckney, novelist ("Three O'Clock Dinner") and chronicler of Charleston's social scene, touched on these subtler contrasts. She remarked that even lofty St. Cecilia's once or twice admitted persons whom "my parents, for example, would not have approved of."

And, without setting her face against economic Charleston, she sketched the feelings of some townspeople who look to the factory-dotted environs and encircling suburbs with a vague sense of apprehension.

"Charleston is essentially conservative and inhospitable to changes in manners, customs, and behavior," Miss Pinckney said. "Our older people were rather unassuming. They were insular and fairly well pleased with themselves, but they never cared for display. Money, as such, was rather disapproved of."

"Now there may be a more strident note to our lives. The people of the suburbs are far more numerous than we, and they're making themselves felt... they change our views."

Meantime, the burgeoning metropolitan area is a stark fact, and Charleston is helping to plot its orderly development. W. C. Dutton, a brisk, bustling Midwesterner, heads the planning group, and in three years of diplomatic and technical endeavors has accumulated more friends than a jail house cat. In charting a rational course for the entire area—he also serves as planning consultant to the city—Dutton is abetted by men like State Sen. T. Allen Legare, and author-architect Albert Simons. Both families have been as familiar to generations of Charlestonians as the bells of St. Michael's.

Churchill Romance Still Enthralls Britons As Golden Wedding Anniversary Nears

LONDON (U.P.)—"Then I married and lived happily ever after." That confident prophecy, written years ago in the autobiography of a young bridegroom, still is blossoming in one of the great and continuing love stories of the 20th century.

The romance of Sir Winston Churchill and his Lady Clementine still enraptures Britons as the couple approach their golden wedding anniversary next year.

But for three of the four Churchill children there have been disappointments, even tragedy, as they strive for the marital happiness achieved by their parents.

Son Randolph, 46, and daughter Diana, 47, and Sarah, 41, have been through the divorce courts. And Sarah's estranged second husband, Anthony Beauchamp, 39, was found dead of an overdose of sleeping tablets this week in his apartment.

For Sir Winston and Lady Clementine, it was love at first sight back in 1908.

He was an up-and-coming politician, irrepressible, unpredictable, the grandson of a duke. She was the beautiful daughter of an army colonel, steady, always gracious, the granddaughter of an earl.

They complement each other perfectly, for his brusqueness, she always has the perfect tact. Once asked whether she thought him handsome when they first met, she replied with a smile: "I thought he was very interesting."

To the 82-year-old statesman, she has always been the "prop and companion of my life... in its stresses long and hard."

Lady Churchill, as strikingly handsome as ever at 71, has let out one secret in keeping her famous husband contented: "First and most important is to feed him well."

The Churchills, now proud grandparents of nine, are a close-knit family group. Sir Winston has kept his private life—and with it the heartaches that are part of every family—out of politics.

For the Churchill children growing up in the shadow of a famed father was difficult—especially when they were imbued with his individualistic traits.

The Churchills' youngest daughter, Mary, 34, met Guards Captain Christopher Soames, now 37, while accompanying her father to Paris shortly after the war. Their engagement was announced 16 days later.

Now she is the mother of two boys and two girls and he is a promising junior government minister.

But for the other Churchill children, romance has been a rocky road.

Vivacious, Auburn-haired Sarah, a New York television actress, was wed twice. She was living apart from her husband when he died. She spends most of her time in the United States.

Both her marriages were in America—the first an elopement with Austrian-born stage comedian Vic Oliver, 16 years her senior, on a Christmas Eve in New York. They were divorced in St. Louis in 1946 after nine years.

She married Anthony Beauchamp, a well-known British society photographer, in Sea Island, Ga., in 1949.

He died of an overdose of sleeping pills on Sunday, Aug. 18.

Diana, an attractive brunette, had been married once before— to John Bailey, son of a South African millionaire. She divorced him in 1935 after three years of marriage.

Randolph, one of Britain's leading political commentators, and his first wife, Pamela Beryl Digby, daughter of Lord Digby, were divorced in 1946 after nine years of marriage.

She charged desertion and complained he seemed to prefer a career as a bachelor's life. He remarried happily eight years ago.

Among his grandchildren, Sir Winston has one namesake. He is Winston Churchill II, 16-year-old son of Randolph and his first wife.

Both her marriages were in America—the first an elopement with Austrian-born stage comedian Vic Oliver, 16 years her senior, on a Christmas Eve in New York. They were divorced in St. Louis in 1946 after nine years.

She married Anthony Beauchamp, a well-known British society photographer, in Sea Island, Ga., in 1949.

Daly of Camden, Ill., became the bride of Staff Sergeant William R. Shenaut of the U.S.A.F., recruiting officer in Jacksonville. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Shenaut of Knoxville, Ill.

Candelabra, ferns and baskets of white gladioli and snapdragons decorated the altar where the double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Lewis Dee Hopper. A white aisle carpet and white satin bows to mark the pews completed the setting.

Miss Elizabeth Hardy of Jacksonville, sang "At Dawning," "Because," and "The Lord's Prayer," accompanied by Miss Joyce Miller at the piano and Mrs. C. M. Crandall at the organ. Mrs. C. M. Crandall played a 30 minute prelude of traditional wedding selections and the usual wedding marches.

Warming Of Earth's Surface Contributes To Frequency Of Storms Such As Tornadoes, Weather Scientist Says

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Reporter

WASHINGTON (AP)—Man may be helping, though in a minor way, to brew some of the earth's violent storms. The tools he is using—adventively using are bulldozers and steam shovels.

So says Dr. Helmut Landsberg, one of the Weather Bureau's top scientists.

A light—and probably temporary—warming-up of the weather—Landsberg says, has been noted in moderate and northern latitudes since the turn of the century.

Conceivably, he adds, this has helped produce increased storminess over many parts of the globe with help from "man-made warming effects." At least in local areas, he says, these effects contribute in a small part to the warming of the atmosphere.

Landsberg listed sources of man-made heat as including:

1. The modernization of the planet, with ever-increasing construction of heat-absorbing paved roads and brick and concrete buildings.
2. The growth of industry with more and more heat-begging furnaces.
3. The great increase in the number of motor vehicles.
4. Even the bodily heat from an ever-increasing population.

He says some scientists contend that increased amounts of carbon dioxide in the air—from industrial and other sources—have produced a "green-house" effect around the planet.

But, he said in an interview, the main reason for the rise in temperature—between one and two degrees on the average compared to 50 years ago, and most of it occurring in the last three decades—is something meteorologic in character, though not yet defined.

One theory, he said, is that it's due to a temporary increase in the sun's radiation. "But there is no proof of this solar radiation theory. And, until we get a satellite running around the world to make long-term observations of the sun and its effects, we won't know whether the radiation of the sun has been increasing."

Whatever the cause of the warming-up effect, he said, it may have contributed, for example, to a possible increase in the number of tornadoes in recent years in the United States and, to a lesser degree, to a known increase in hurricanes coming out of the tropic doldrums.

As to the possible duration of the warming-up, Landsberg said that it is considered probably temporary because there have been at least "irregular" cycles of warming and cooling in the past. But he said there is not sufficient data to hazard an estimate as to how long—or how short—the present trend might be.

As for the bulldozer and steam-shovel concept, Landsberg says: "This is not an official view of the Weather Bureau, but I personally have the feeling that we have changed the natural surface of the earth so much—replacing forested areas with lots of heat-absorbing asphalt and concrete—that it's conceivable this may have quite a sizable effect on the frequency of local storms, such as tornadoes.

"These man-made changes in the earth's ground cover could bring about a different system of heat exchange between the ground and the atmosphere. That is, when you strip the land, you accentuate the heat exchange.

"And, since tornadoes are undoubtedly due in part to a heat phenomenon—with a rising column of hot air apparently being one of the requirements—

Returned from a day's fishing off the coral reefs that surround the island of Ceylon, a group of outrigger sailing canoes lie high on the beach at Negombo, ancient fishing village. The fishermen (inset) carry their catch to shore to be sold.

FISHING IN CEYLON

Primitive Sailing Craft
Ply Indian Ocean Waters

ATTRACTIVE American tourist Maggie Pierce chats with a net caster who provides the bait for deep sea fishing.

THE ISLAND of Ceylon, in the Indian ocean, is 272 miles long and 140 miles wide at its broadest part. Twenty miles from Colombo, the historic island's capital, lies the picturesque and ancient fishing village of Negombo, the location of many bitter battles between French, Dutch, Portuguese and British forces for possession of the island.

The port has remained unchanged through the years, and its ancient methods of fishing still prevail. Negombo boasts a fleet of more than 500 fishing boats—all outrigger canoes, with square sails and hulls that have been hand-hewn out of logs. To passing ships, at a distance, the outriggers resemble Chinese junks as they sail between the island's thousands of coral reefs, seeking a day's catch. The craft, 20 to 25 feet in length, are not as wide as a modern canoe. They are held together with handmade rope and caulked with resin in centuries-old tradition.

Every day of the year, except during the monsoon season (May-July) when rough seas occur, the boats and their crews of three to five leave port early in the morning for the trip to the outer reefs. Only one man, using a ten-foot rod and line, fishes at a time. The others handle the boat and assist the fisherman in landing the catch. The small nets carried aboard are used to catch the small fish that in turn are used for bait.

Despite the muddy color of the island waters the variety of fish caught is similar to those in Florida waters. Bonito, pompano, sea bass and sea perch are the usual catch at Negombo and all are good eating. Almost the entire catch, with the exception of that shared by the crew, is sent to the large fishing market at Colombo where it is sold at wholesale daily.

Because the big problem on Ceylon is lack of refrigeration and canning facilities, a large catch must be "dumped" on the market for what it will bring. A good haul for the entire fleet for one day is seven tons, for which a fisherman nets on an average one rupee a pound. The rupee is worth about 20 cents in American money.

While the majority of the people of the island of Ceylon are Buddhists, the Portuguese converted many to Catholicism, with Negombo remaining, even today, decidedly Christian.

FOOD FOR A CREW is carried by a fisherman's wife to the boat. Fruit is main diet.

SMALL FISH are netted and sold on the beach to fishing boats for bait.

SETTING OUT for a day's fishing, the outrigger canoes, or catamarans, prepare to shove off from the beach at Negombo. Many of the fishermen have Portuguese names, but few if any of the townspeople have Portuguese blood. The majority of the people are Catholic.

King Features Syndicate.

NET MINDERS squat on beach at Negombo or torn in the coral reefs during the day's casting. Cord of the coconut fiber is used.

GRAIN CONTRACTS
CLOSE LOWER IN WEEK'S SELLING

By EARL AYKROID
CHICAGO (AP)—Price trends of grains on the Board of Trade this week held within a narrow range up and down, but most futures contracts ended lower than a week ago.

Trading volume of most futures was smaller than in previous weeks. The smaller volume, together with liquidation prior to posting of tenders on September futures and a general lack of buying incentives, made for an easier tone in the market as a whole.

First notices of intentions to deliver grains against the nearby September contracts were given. Heaviest tenders were on corn, with almost three million bushels posted during the trading session.

Other deliveries included about 1 1/2 million bushels of wheat, 465,000 bushels of oats and 95,000 bushels of rye.

Wheat ended the week 2 1/2 cents lower to 1 1/2 cents higher than Friday a week ago. Corn was down 1 1/4 to 4 1/4, oats 1/4 to 3/4 lower, rye 1/2 lower to 1/4 higher, soybeans unchanged to 1 cent higher, and hard wheat 3 to 3 1/2 cents a hundred pounds higher.

The feature of the week was the sharp break in September corn, which declined to new seasonal lows on three consecutive days. Although the more distant corn futures all lost ground, they held well behind the nearby contract.

Persistent selling of corn from Commodity Credit Corp. stocks was believed largely responsible for the extreme sell-off of the September future, which declined as low as $1.20 1/4 Friday, before rallying to close higher for the first time in a week.

New York Stock Market

By ED MORSE
NEW YORK (AP)—Hopes of greater future expenditures for aircraft and missiles helped this week to give the stock market its first rise in six weeks.

Russia's report of a successful Inter-Continental Ballistic Missile combined with its obdurate attitude toward the West's disarmament proposals brought the conviction to Wall Street that the United States must continue to build up its defenses.

The result was a rise in aircraft, missile-making issues and other defense stocks which brought sympathetic advances to a wide variety of other stocks.

The rise was aided further by the technical position of the market, which has been declining generally since its high for the year was posted July 12.

Since July the market on average had dropped about two-thirds of the way down to the year's lows of Feb. 12.

During the month of August, alone, it was estimated, the quoted value of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange fell around 215 billions.

Uncertainty about the trend of business and the stock market after the traditional Labor Day turning point was a big factor in the decline. Thanks to the tough attitude of the Soviet this week there was a growing belief in financial quarters that it would be a good long time before the prop of big spending for defense would be removed from industry, despite the present economy drive and cutbacks.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks this week advanced $2.90 to $175.70.

Douglas Outlines
Filibuster Fight

can adopt new rules by majority vote, debate on an appeal of his ruling could be brought to a close by the device of "moving the previous question." The House uses this device now, but the Senate long ago threw it out of its rules.

However, Douglas said that if Nixon held the Senate, in effect, had no existing rules, Jefferson's Manual would be the authority the Senate would have to follow. He said this provides for shutting off debate by a majority vote.

Douglas Proposal
Douglas and others have proposed a sliding scale rule to shut off filibusters. Under this, the Senate could limit debate at any time by a vote of two thirds of those participating in the roll call. If the filibuster were permitted to run along 15 days without a debate limitation, talk could be shut off by a majority vote of the Senate membership.

Douglas said he thinks a majority of the Senate would support such a rule.

However, Sen. Mansfield of Montana, the assistant Democratic leader, voiced the opinion that the Senate will not agree to kill filibusters by a vote of less than two-thirds of those participating.

An influential Southern senator, who asked not to be quoted by name, said he thinks he and his Dixie colleagues eventually will be forced to accept a rule enforcing a two-thirds vote of those voting.

Sen. Javits, R-N.Y., said on a radio program recorded for New York stations that because of Thurmond's lone filibuster attempt "I think that the prospect of doing something about Rule 22 are very much brighter."

Javits said he was not satisfied with the civil rights bill Congress passed. But he added that "it does put the federal government into doing something about safeguarding voting rights and there is the first measurable advance in federal legislation on civil rights in 82 years."

Receipts at Chicago for the week were among the smallest in a year. Prices advanced Monday and Tuesday, edged off slightly at midweek and again turned higher Friday.

In the wholesale meat trade advances in some fresh pork items were offset by measurable declines in other cuts.

In the cattle market choice and prime fed steers closed active and steady to 25 cents higher than a week ago. Prime fed heifers ended steady to 50 cents lower and lesser kinds steady to 25 cents higher. Cows ended strong to fully 50 cents up and bulls 25 to 50 cents lower.

Receipts were nominally unchanged from last week, but around 30 per cent less than for the corresponding week a year ago.

The Legislature also voted to double the 60-man state police force and 160 new men already have been added to highway patrols.

Syria's Neighbors Pressure
U.S. To Join Baghdad Pact

WASHINGTON (AP)—Syria's swing toward communism has moves to offset the political foot-candle generated by the United States in the Middle East through the rise to power in Syria of pro-Soviet army officers.

State Department trouble shooter Loy Henderson is due back from a Middle East survey mission early in the week to report to Dulles on possible counter measures. Henderson turned up the new pressures for U.S. membership in the Baghdad Pact when he conferred with Turkish and Iraqi leaders this week in Turkey, according to diplomatic requests on the part of Lebanon and Jordan, other Syrian neighbors linked to the West, for some reassertion of U.S. support. Both countries are understood to have indicated a fear of possible Communist-directed strokes, probably in the form of political subversion.

The Middle East situation is part of a broadening pattern of new tensions either directly or indirectly involving Washington and Moscow, which has become apparent in the last few weeks. For example, the atmosphere of hostility has enveloped the London disarmament negotiations.

Henderson is coming back from the Middle East to report on the results of what the State Department has insisted was a fact-finding mission.

The only line Henderson is understood to have urged positively on the leaders of friendly Middle Eastern countries was that the Syrian crisis is primarily one for them to deal with, though they could be assured of U.S. cooperation and support for whatever steps they might take.

Cuts By Congress

000 spending figure by more than one billion dollars.

He pointed out many of the cuts would be restored in supplemental, or deficiency appropriations early next year, and others were of bookkeeping nature which do not affect spending.

Congressional committee experts estimated a couple of months ago that fiscal 1958 spending actually would exceed the original estimate by one billion dollars.

That was before the administration itself began to clamp down on all agencies, putting fixed ceilings even on the Defense Department.

But some members of Congress feel this economy drive will be stopped by Russia's announcement of last Monday that it had developed a successful intercontinental ballistic missile.

If the President decides to take the reins off the military services, there are 35 billion dollars of unspent funds from fiscal 1957 and prior years available. This is in addition to the $4,760,000,000 of new defense money voted this year for fiscal 1958.

The $67,160,000,000 is tens for any year since the Republicans took office in 1953. The biggest previous total was last year, $66,720,000,000.

fire force forward in an hour and then continued to shuttle back and forth with supplies and ammunition. Officers in charge of the operation reported that within 30 minutes after the exercises began enough troops had been landed to seize the objective area. They expressed complete satisfaction with the maneuvers, which lasted just under three hours.

Scores of civil defense and scientific tests also were conducted during and after the blast, which was the 16th in the current test series.

The mushroom cloud erupting from the explosion soared to 35,000 feet before it broke up. The top layer continued on up to 40,000 feet. Winds were reported blowing at varying speeds and directions in the upper altitudes, leading test officials to predict that fallout would be widely dispersed.

The effect of the variable winds, the AEC said, would be to reduce the intensity of fallout in any one area. The towering cloud broke up into four distinct air masses each of which moved in a slightly different direction, ranging from northeast to southeast.

An anonymous tip led police to pick up and question Ralph J. Aloia, 39, a barber and ex-convict. Chief of Detectives Patrick Deeley said no information was developed to connect Aloia with the Andersen slaying. However, he was held for further questioning.

Aloia's car, Deeley said, contained $100.00 worth of women's clothes, burglar's tools and sets of pornographic pictures.

Andrew Moser, 26, spokesman for the skin divers at the North Side harbor where Judy's body was found in two floating oil drums, Saturday asked all skin divers in the Chicago area to come to the harbor to help in the search. Moser said a very thorough and quick search of the entire harbor could be made with enough divers.

More than 150 employees of the city department of water and sewers were instructed on search procedures. Sewers are being searched for Judy's clothing, wallet and crucifix.

One by one, tips trickled into police headquarters, but most were duds.

A razor-sharp hatchet and two stained rags found in the harbor area, Friday, were discarded as leads.

The crime lab determined the rags were stained with wax or paint and grease, and the hatchet had only traces of red paint, Deeley said.

A notebook found in the harbor with the misspelled name "Judith May" written on the fly leaf, did not belong to Judy, the slain girl's father said. Deeley said the book offered no clues.

Meanwhile, a 10-year-old girl, who said she was kidnapped at gunpoint and was forced to undress by a man she did not know, was questioned by detectives on the chance of a connection with the torso killing.

The girl told police the man took her from a parked car in a Southwest Side forest preserve as she waited for a woman companion to return from picking wild grapes. She said she was taken to an apartment and held prisoner for about two hours before being released unharmed.

The police laboratory experts studied the ashes of a pair of trousers, inadvertently burned by the owner of an apartment building near Judith Mae's West Side home.

The building owner, Ralph Newton, 57, said he discovered the trousers in the basement some time after the girl disappeared Aug. 16. He added the trousers were stained.

Eight residents of the apartment building reported hearing gunshots the night of Aug. 19.

Judith last was seen Aug. 16 leaving the home of Elena Abatacola, 15, after a visit. The Abatacola family said Judith telephoned at 11 p.m. to tell her parents that she was on her way home. It was the last time any known person saw her alive.

Chicago Local Names Candidate
To Oppose Hoffa

CHICAGO (AP)—Officers of a Chicago local announced Saturday the nomination of a candidate to oppose James R. Hoffa of Detroit for presidency of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Nominee of the 6,000-member Chicago Milk Wagon Drivers Union, Local 753 of the Teamsters is Thomas J. Haggerty, the local's secretary-treasurer.

Haggerty's candidacy was announced in a statement by Thomas J. Hoban, president, and other officers of Local 753.

The statement said the Milk Wagon Drivers and their officers "stand for democracy in union procedure, and shall defend to the utmost those bulwarks of trade union democracy typified by autonomous rights of the local unions and of the joint councils throughout the nation."

Haggerty, 52, secretary-treasurer of Local 753 since 1940, is a member of the executive board of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and a member of the Chicago Board of Education.

Haggerty will make a bid to succeed retiring Dave Beck at the Miami convention of the 13-million member Teamster Union which starts Sept. 30. Hoffa, midwestern boss of the teamsters, is regarded as the most likely successor to Beck.

Harry Grayson's SCOREBOARD

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

SAN FRANCISCO—(NEA)—Contractor Charles L. Harney is tucking the grandstand of the Giants' new baseball park back into a 190-foot hill which will act as a break against the cold wind and San Francisco's famous fog.

Experts on the subject contend that the new plant at Candlestick Point in the city's Bay View district will be much better protected against the elements than the present Seals Stadium.

A lot of outsiders contend that summer nights in the Golden City are too windy and cold for baseball. Bill Veck, making a survey for major league ball in California, suggested that a new San Francisco layout be heated. So many customers were frozen out in 1955 that the new owners, the Boston Red Sox, had the Seals play only in the afternoon in '56 but that didn't work either.

Walter Mails, who is in a position to know best, says that visitors and Johnny Come Latelys object to the San Francisco baseball weather, which has been unusually favorable this season, by the way. Mails, the celebrated duster who helped the Cleveland Indians to the world championship in 1920, points to the minor league record of 670,546 paid admissions at Seals Stadium in 1946. He says, and we agree, the weather business is over-worked.

"It was the large segments of people brought to San Francisco by World War II who put the rap on our baseball weather," contends Mails, who pitched for the Seals for 10 years and has been their public relations director for 20. "Like any story; it got bigger with each retelling until they had clubs playing here in snow up to their knees."

"The people embellishing this yarn don't know what fog is. Listen to them, you'd think we need a fog horn at the plate and a lantern at each base."

Unlike most San Franciscans, Mails doesn't wear a topcoat on July and August evenings.

"The people here enjoy the good weather. San Francisco is a top summer resort," he stresses. "The weather won't keep them away from the Giants' games. Give them a show and they'll come out. I don't contend that San Francisco will be another Milwaukee, but I'm certain the Giants will play to 1,250,000 in each of the first three years. After that, when the newness wears off, the Giants will be on their own. But attendance will never drop as low as it has at the Polo Grounds."

Outside of baseball, San Francisco long has been a big league town used to the best.

It will go along with a second division club, but not one that's down in the dumps too long. It's like any other city in that respect.

The Giants are going to be sorely handicapped by lack of seating accommodations well into next season, for Contractor Harney says he cannot hope to complete the new park before July 1. This means a capacity of no more than 18,075 at the present Seals Stadium until then.

The Dodgers have to play at Los Angeles Wrigley Field, where there are only a little more than 23,000 seats, all next season. That is, if they come—and out here it's taken for granted.

These historic franchise switches remain inconceivable. No one can understand why the American League, after having a foothold in San Francisco, is turning California over to the National.

Even more incredulous is the National League abandoning the New York metropolitan area and its 14 million people to the American.

Perhaps the most implausible of all is the Giants and Dodgers rushing to the Golden West before suitable parks have been built.

At any rate, the San Francisco Giants are a reality. Now on to Los Angeles and Dodger doings.

Dodgers Maintain 2nd Place In NL With 7-5 Win Over N.Y. Giants

BROOKLYN (P)—Sent sprawling twice in the sixth inning by high close pitches, grim faced Gino Cimoli got even with Marv Grissom by jacking a two-run double for the key blow in Brooklyn's 7-5 victory over the New York Giants Saturday. The win kept the Brooks in second place.

Cimoli scored two other Dodger runs and shared the starring role with Ed Roebuck, the able relief pitcher. Roebuck not only stopped the Giants without a hit or run in his 3-1-3 inning stint but he also touched off the sixth inning rally climaxed by Cimoli. Ed then homered in the eighth.

Grissom came into the game in the sixth after the Giants had scored three unearned runs and gone ahead 5-4. The York right-hander fanned the first two batters but Roebuck started Grissom on the road to disaster with a single. Junior Gilliam followed with another single.

Trying to keep Cimoli from digging in, Grissom twice made the Dodger left fielder hit the dirt. Then Gino scored his vengeance with a single scoring Roebuck and Gilliam.

Why They Don't Permit Betting AtHambletonian

A Jacksonville race fan who attended the Hambletonian at the DuQuoin State Fair last week tells this one:

A modishly-gowned lady, bedecked in furs with a few diamonds tossed in to add sparkle to her ensemble, kept up ceaseless chatter with her husband and another couple who occupied a box.

Those within earshot soon reached conclusion that the lady was having herself a thrilling afternoon, but was not too well grounded in the sport of harness racing.

After Hickory Smoke waffled under the wire ahead of the field, the announcer informed the crowd over the public address system that "the time is 2:02."

"Oh, they must be on Standard Time here," the lady in the furs remarked, glancing at her watch.

Crowley Emerges Halfway Leader In Insurance Open

WETHERSFIELD, Conn.—Bob Crowley of Weston, Mass., Saturday emerged as the leader of the $22,000 Insurance City Open 72-hole golf tournament at the halfway mark.

His 9-under par 133 was one stroke better than anybody else's but nobody would concede anything.

Right behind Crowley were Gardner Dickinson of Panama City, Fla., and Ed Whalley Jr. of Salem, Mass., who had shared the opening day lead with Crowley, and young veteran Art Wall of Ponconeo Manor, Pa., each with 134.

And only two strokes off the pace were Arnold Palmer of LaTrobe, Pa., last year's winner, and Bill Ray of Tucson, Ariz.

Any one of these stars, as well as at least a dozen others just below, is in a position to take charge. But, if the 36-year-old Crowley is worried about it, he doesn't show it. He was all smiles "and having a good time."

Round Table returned a winners' net of $100,350.

Round Table returned $4, $2.60 and $2.40 among his backers in a throng of 25,481, the season's high at Washington Park Iron Horse paid $2.30 and $2.60. The show price for Augusta State Farm's Ekaba was $2.

The time over a fast turf was 1:55, not far behind the track record of 1:54 3-5 set by Swaps in 1955.

Round Table now has won 10 times in 16 starts this year and earned turfdom's top winnings of $423,450 in 1957.

VANCE WINS 4th STRAIGHT — RACES HERE MONDAY

DICK VANCE of Hannibal, Mo., capped his fourth straight feature victory of the season at the Morgan County Fairgrounds speedway Friday night before a large turnout in the next to last stock car event of the 1957 season.

The local speedway will be the scene of the stock car finale Monday afternoon in the Labor Day classic, with the time trials slated for 1:30 p.m. DST. The scene will then shift to Pittsfield Monday night with the rouloffs starting at 7:30 p.m. CST.

Vance (left) receives the checkered award from Robert Pollack of Macomb, this year's official starter. Vance had to come from behind to win the wincup race of the evening. McGee gave Vance a run for the money for awhile but couldn't keep pace and the P-38 from Hannibal left the rest of the pack trailing in his dust.

There were plenty of mishaps throughout the evening and a great many of the cars had to be scratched due to engine trouble, broken fuel lines etc.

Perhaps the most serious incident of the evening came about in the first heat race. Dave Alenworth of Plainfield went over the northeast curve on the eighth lap in the 10-lap race and went end over end before ending up on his right side. However, Alenworth emerged the victor in what could have proved fatal without even a slight scratch.

Dale Hvarven and John Petty probably staged the closest race of the night in the semi-feature. The two drivers stayed even on the curves and the straightaway lap after lap but Hvarven finally gained the lead on the whistle lap and coasted to victory in the remaining two laps.

Vance plus a host of fine drivers will be on hand to run for the stakes this Monday afternoon in the Labor Day attraction.

Friday Night Scores

Warren Spahn, an old hand at 36, and Jack Sanford, a rookie at 28, are a step closer to completing a pair of proud pitching projects now that they've bagged the National League lead with 17 victories apiece.

Spahn, Milwaukee's s t e a d y southpaw who claimed the 220th success of a 13-year career with a 9-5 decision at Cincinnati Friday night, can become the second major league lefty ever to win 20 or more eight times.

And Sanford, a right-hander who spent seven years in the minors before coming up with Philadelphia, is within range of becoming the first rookie to win 20 in the NL since 1947 after beating Pittsburgh 4-3.

Spahn won his seventh in a row, but needed relief help as the Braves retained their seven-game lead. Brooklyn held on with a 10-0 job on the New York Giants before Don Drysdale's three-hitter.

Third-place St. Louis stayed 7-1 back with a 2-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs who had won six straight from the Cards.

In the American League, the hitting race between leader Ted Williams of Boston and New York's Mickey Mantle narrowed to one point.

Williams, marking his 39th birthday, was 1-for-5, losing two points for a .377 average as the Red Sox ripped Baltimore 6-1. Mantle, playing despite a bum leg, was 3-for-4 and took the home run lead with his 34th while picking up three points and closing to 376 as the Yankees lost to last-place Washington 4-2.

The Yankees retained their six-game edge over second-place Chicago, however, as Kansas City tripped the White Sox and Bob (No-Hit) Keegan 3-1.

Cleveland closed within four percentage points of fourth-place Detroit with a 6-5, 10-inning victory over the Tigers in the other AL game.

Spahn, already the leading 20-game winner among NL southpaws, can match the modern (post 1900) high set by Lefty Grove in the American League with the old Philadelphia Athletics and Red Sox. Eddie Plank, another onetime A's great, is the only other left-hander to have won 20 in seven seasons.

Spahn had the help of four home runs by Eddie Mathews, Carl Sawatski, Frank Torre and Wes Covington, in beating the Redlegs for the seventh straight time (six this year), but left in the sixth after giving up eight of Cincinnati's nine hits. Don McMahon, Bob Trowbridge and Taylor Phillips worked in relief before the Redlegs, now 2-15 against the Braves, finally gave in with the bases loaded in the ninth.

Sanford, who has lost five while Spahn has lost eight, beat the Pirates with an eight-hitter in pursuit of a rookie-year 20 wins, last achieved by Larry Jansen of the New York Giants. The Phils completed their scoring in three innings, with Gran Hammer driving in two runs, then left it to Sanford.

Drysdale, the Dodgers' top winner, allowed only singles and retired the last 13 in order while winning his 14th and fourth shutout. The Dodgers had 12 hits, including homers by Gil Hodges, Charlie Neal and Carl Furillo. Neal's three-run shot sealed an 11th defeat for Giant ace Ruben Gomez in the second.

Southpaw Wilmer Mizell won his sixth for the Cards, fanning 11 that sent the Cubs to a league strikeout record with 812. They had set the old mark with 806 in 1955. The major league mark was set by Washington last year with 877. R o o k i e Moe Drabowsky struck out nine, but lost his 13th in two singles and Del Ennis sacrifice fly in the ninth.

Williams, moved to tears by a pre-game birthday party by fans in Baltimore, got his hit on his last at bat—an infield single on a close play. The Red Sox scored five in the sixth, two on Jackie Jensen's home run, as Bob Porterfield won his fourth with a six-hitter.

WRITING JOB—Mickey Mantle has to write his way to and from ball park dressing rooms as the autograph-seeking kids mob the Yankee star at every point on American League map.

Robert Morrison is starting his second year as head coach of all sports at Virden High and his football team tied with Auburn for the title last year. He served for one year as head football mentor at Astoria High before moving to Virden and coached at Moweaqua. Coach Al Sherline has indicated that Shelbyville will be the basketball power of the Mid State conference this winter and he stated that his Taylorville Tornados will get a severe test early in the season. The Taylorville five will open the season at Jacksonville High Nov. 29 and Coach Sherline believes that Coach John Chapman's five will give his team a rugged night.

Carrollton High might be a strong contender for the Illinois Valley football title this season with a new mentor in "Red" Moore and ace halfback Ron Carter carrying the mail for the Hawks. He was one of the better ball players in this conference last season and should improve during the 1957 campaign. The Hawks won the basketball and track championships last year and might add football to make it three straight. (It would be the first time in the history of the Valley loop for any Carrollton squads to win three conference trophies in a row. Jerseyville and Roadhouse have accomplished this feat in former years.

College Football Just Around The Corner, Official Opening Today

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

College football throws its padded shoulders into the thick of the crowded late summer sports picture Sunday with the traditional Sept. 1 opening of practice all across the land.

From Maine to California and Minnesota to Texas, coaches start looking for nimble - fingered T quarterbacks, fleet halfbacks and rugged linemen.

Only Navy, which received a special concession because of early opening of classes, was able to break away from the barrier ahead of schedule. The Midshipmen have been hardening their muscles for the last two weeks.

Coaches are crying as usual and old grads are predicting championships.

The practice season opens on a familiar note: Who's going to stop Oklahoma?

The Sooners, unbeaten in four years and 40 games, again are strong favorites for the mythical national championship symbolized by No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press poll.

Coach Bud Wilkinson, hard hit by graduation, apparently has replacements to take care of a schedule which includes an opening game with Pittsburgh and a test against both Texas and

Notre Dame.

Most of the teams which challenged the Sooners a year ago for top honors will return with formidable squads.

Tennessee again looks like the class of Dixie. Georgia Tech will come up with its usual fast, ever-dangerous tail. Iowa, Minnesota, Texas A & M, Michigan and Michigan State appear to be formidable.

Most of the teams will have to reach form quickly. In three weeks—Sept. 21—many of the outfits, including leading contenders, have major tests on that date.

Oklahoma may find its winnibits streak in jeopardy against Pittsburgh in a game to be played at Pitt's stadium. The Panthers have returned the nucleus of last year's strong eleven and coach Johnny Micholosen has injected some new T-formation backfield wizardry.

Intersectional games put flavor into the first big Saturday schedule.

California, which is reported making a comeback in the Pacific Coast Conference, will be host to Southern Methodist. Navy invades Boston College. Texas and Georgia play at Atlanta. Texas A & M and Maryland clash in Dallas.

Patton Leads U.S. To 15th Walker Cup Win Over Great Britain

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

MINNEAPOLIS—Billy Joe Patton accomplished the impossible again Saturday, coming from 3-down at noon to beat Reid Jack up, and lead the U.S. amateur golfers to their 15th victory over Great Britain in the 16th international match for the Walker Cup.

Patton, the spray-shooting lumber dealer from Morganton, N.C., has been noted several years for his slightly incredible golf feats, but he never turned in a more remarkable one than he did Saturday.

Not only was it a comeback of astounding proportions, but it tied off the American team, which had been in a very precarious position after the morning round of the 36-hole singles matches.

As Billy Joe started to move, the whole American group turned killers, and by the time Patton reached the 36th green, the one point he gained by beating the current British amateur champion was all the U.S. needed, to keep the international trophy.

The Americans had taken a 2-1 lead in the Scotch foursomes Friday and won the first four singles matches Saturday. That made a total of six points and left the British without a chance to win the trophy in the four remaining singles.

With Jack leading Patton 5 up in the No. 1 singles match, the U.S. team was not better than even for the morning part of that competition and had only a one-point cushion from the foursomes.

It looked as if Britain might finally regain the trophy it won only in 1933.

Then the mazing Billy Joe, still missing the fairways with his wild tee shots but recovering to make birdies and pars, took just nine holes to regain all he had lost in the morning.

He went out in 32, 3 under standard, and figures for the 6:50-par par 3-36-71. Jimmie Hulse, course, and squared the match on the 27th green. Jack, who didn't lose a hole between the 6th and 16th Saturday morning, didn't win one between the 18th and the 32nd. That was when the match really turned into a thriller for some 3,000 spectators.

Twice on the closing holes, the wily Scot drew even with Patton, the second time with a birdie three on the 34th. On the next hole, however, Jack needed three putts. Patton scooped his par to go ahead and they halved the final hole.

Before Patton wound up the day's star performance, former U.S. Walker Cup captain Bill Campbell of Huntington, W. Va., and Rex Baxter, Jr. of Amarillo, Tex., youngest American player, had pulled away with fine afternoon performances to win their matches, and Bill Hyndman of Philadelphia, ahead all the way, had won easily.

Joe Carr in the morning, won four straight holes on the back nine in the afternoon and closed on his opponent 3 and 2. Baxter, also square after 18 holes in his match with Alan Thirlwell, fired 31 on the front nine in the afternoon.

The eve's retina really is a portion of the brain which grows out of the bony cranial cavity, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Official Opening Of Big 10 Grid Practices Will Attract 700 Men

CHICAGO (AP)—The official opening of Big Ten football practices Monday—leading to the season's first games Sept. 28—will send 700 huskies into action.

Nearly half of them will be sophomores. Another 200 will be holdover lettermen.

The mixture of new talent, some of the best of the conference has had, with the large stockpile of experienced hands, gives promise of another exciting Big Ten campaign.

Five teams are given a chance to take the championship.

Iowa, the defending titlist and Rose Bowl winner, and Minnesota are the early top choices. Michigan State, Michigan and Ohio State are powerful contenders.

Illinois and Northwestern head the second division and have the upset power to scramble the title race.

Purdue, Indiana and Wisconsin fall in behind in the handicapping form.

Iowa has 21 letterman, including seven regulars, in a squad of 75. Missing is quarterback Kenny Ploen but there is a fine replacement in Randy Duncan. A solid line and more backfield speed, especially at the halfback spots, make the Hawkeyes a distinct threat to repeat.

Minnesota has the largest turnout in the conference, 88. These include 27 holdovers and one of the country's finest split T quarterbacks, Bobby Cox.

Michigan State, with 27 lettermen, and Michigan with 23, should be dangerous and either could take it all.

Michigan must find replacements for two great ends, Ron Kramer and Tom Maentz. But the Wolverines appear to have fine balance and what could be the Big Ten's most capable backfield.

Graduation hit Ohio State hard, but 22 lettermen are on hand. The main problem appears at quarterback.

With Bill Offenbecker providing improvement at quarterback, Illinois will be aiming for upsets with its usual backfield speed.

Purdue lost its air arm, Len Dawson, and must rebuild around all-conference fullback Mel Dilard.

Sophomores hold much of the hopes at Wisconsin.

Indiana will switch over to the Tennessee single wing with a flourish called the "side saddle T."

Leslie Breaks His American Land Speed Mark

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah (AP)—For the second time in a week, Roy Leslie of Denver broke his American land speed record Saturday, in the 9th annual Bonneville National Speed Trials.

He posted an average speed of 266.204 miles an hour in two laps along a three-mile speed strip on the salt flats.

Last Thursday the 43-year-old auto mechanic posted a record of 263.159 m.p.h. to break a record he set himself—253.411 m.p.h. in qualifying for Saturday's final record assault. Leslie pushed his three-cylinder, streamlined hot rod Friday to a one-way speed of 249.473.

The latter mark is the fastest land speed ever attained in an American car by an American driver—and the fourth-fastest in the world.

Leslie's specially built car has two of its engines hooked up to drive the front wheels, with the third supplying power to the rear wheels. Its total output comes to about 670 horsepower.

Thor Missile Launched: Falls Short Of Goal

WASHINGTON (AP)—Authoritative officials said Saturday a Thor ballistic missile was successfully launched from Patrick Air Force Base, Fla., Friday but the test was marred by a failure that cut the flight far short of its planned goal.

Although military officers are forbidden by the Defense Department to comment on the performance of new missiles or even to identify officially those that are launched, it was learned that the missile fired Friday was the Thor. This is the Air Force candidate for selection as America's intermediate-range ballistic missile.

The missile was seen by civilian observers when it ascended from the launching platform at Cape Canaveral. Observers reported that the missile could be seen for about four minutes and that before disappearing from sight, it appeared to be veering seaward in arcs.

It was learned in Washington that the Thor left its launching platform according to plan but shortly after getting into the air, it started turning and seemed to be describing a wide sweep that might have brought it back toward the mainland. The missile never returned, because it was destroyed at sea.

The uncompleted flight of the Thor Tuesday followed the successful launching of an Army Jupiter from the same base on Wednesday. The Jupiter traveled 1,500 miles. According to reports from the tracking stations located in the Bahamas and West Indies islands, the missile remained on its predetermined course until the 55-foot-long blast tube containing the rocket engine, fuel supply and control system burned out just before reaching the end of the line in the South Atlantic.

Senators Rally For Pair In 9th To Trip New York Yankees, 6-5

NEW YORK (AP)—Mickey Mantle took over the American League batting lead with a run-producing pinch single but yielded the top spot in runs batted in to Washington's Roy Sievers Saturday night as the Senators rallied for two runs in the ninth in a 6-5 decision over the New York Yankees.

Mantle, kept out of the starting lineup by aching legs, lashed out a single as a pinchhitter for Tony Kubek in the eighth to spark a two-run Yankee rally that tied the score at 4-4.

The hit boosted Mantle's batting average to .378, one point more than Boston's Ted Williams, who got one hit in three times at bat against Baltimore.

Sievers, however, drove in two runs with his 34th homer in the third for his 91st and 92nd RBI. Mantle has 91. The homer also tied the Washington outfielder for first with Mantle in that department.

K. C. Power Plant Strikers Ordered To Go To Work

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Striking unions maintained picket lines at Kansas City Power & Light Co. facilities Saturday despite a state ultimatum to return to work.

Gov. Edward V. Long, acting in the absence of vacationing Gov. James T. Blair, ordered the utility, which serves 200,000 customers in metropolitan Kansas City, under state seizure at midnight Friday. Approximately 2,000 union employees had walked off their jobs Monday in a dispute over wages.

Gov. Blair, recuperating at Gaylord, Mich., after a recent operation, said he has been in contact with Long and was aware the state would take action if the strikers did not go back to work.

Blair said the King-Thompson Act obligates the state to act in such situations. He added that he planned to return to work next week.

Saturday, Long warned picketing locals of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers they would face "heavy penalties" if they continue the strike.

He advised the strikers to go back to work in a reasonable time or "I will have no choice but to instruct the attorney general to proceed with the proper action."

Under the law, that would consist of penalizing the individual strikers with loss of job seniority, and fining each local $10,000 each day it defies the state. Each of the union officers could also be fined $1,000 a day.

Long did not specify when his ultimatum would run out. The three IBEW locals said they intended to keep picketing until mass meetings of strikers Sunday.

"At that meeting, we'll get some idea of what we are going to do," William H. James, a union spokesman, said.

Supervisory personnel have maintained the utility facilities since Monday's walkout. There has been no interruption in service.

The unions are asking for a 7 1/2 per cent increase in wages, the company has offered a 5 1/2 per cent increase. Present wages range between $1.60 and $3 an hour.

Unser, who led from the 45th lap on the mile dirt track, drove a 1957 Ford. He beat out Nelson Stacey, Cincinnati, in a 1957 Chevrolet convertible, by less than an eighth of a mile.

Others in the top 10 included: Les Snow, Bloomington, Ill., ninth; Sonny Gross of Quincy, Ill., led for the first 44 laps until the timing mechanism gave way in his 1957 Pontiac.

Wrongfully Fired China Expert Is Rehired

WASHINGTON (AP)—John Stewart Service, China expert whom the Supreme Court ruled was wrongfully fired in 1951, goes back to work for the State Department next Tuesday.

A State Department official said Service will be in a "nonsensitive" position as deputy to Thomas S. Estes, deputy assistant secretary of state for operations. This office handles housekeeping chores for the department—dealing with such things as supplies, transportation and building operations.

The 8-0 Supreme Court ruling of last June 17 overruled a decision by the U. S. Court of Appeals here that former Secretary of State Dean Acheson had acted within his discretionary powers in firing Service. On July 3, U. S. District Judge James W. Morris followed this up by ordering Service restored to his job with back pay to Dec. 14, 1951.

Acheson had said he acted under congressional authority which he said gave him absolute discretion to act in the best interests of the United States. In discharging Service, Acheson cited an adverse finding by the government's Loyalty Review Board.

Knight, Knowland Swap Harangue Over '58 Campaign

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Gov. Goodwin J. Knight told Sen. William E. Knowland to his face Saturday he will face "a hard contest" if he enters California's Republican race for governor.

The Senate minority leader, home from Congress for an extensive statewide speaking tour, replied in effect that "intimidation" would get Knight nowhere.

The two Republicans met at a State Fair breakfast attended by more than 500 of California's leading figures in business, industry, agriculture and government.

Knight, adding to a prepared speech, told Knowland that if he decides to run against him, "I intend to wage a very vigorous campaign," that if there is a contest, "It is bound to be a hard contest."

Knowland, at a press conference later, said, "I have never been intimidated about running against incumbents." And, in answer to a question, he tossed the presidential "paw" issue back at Knight.

Knight, in an earlier statement unmistakably pointed at the California senator, spoke out against using the office of governor as a pawn or stepping-stone for the presidency.

"The record shows that I have never used any public office as a pawn," Knowland replied. He said he served out his "contract" as a state assemblyman and state senator, and that he would finish out his term in the U. S. Senate, ending next year.

Appearing on a television program later, Knowland said in answer to a question that "I have made no deal or understanding with Vice President Nixon for his support in the event that Knowland enters the gubernatorial race."

However, he said they had been friends for years. He called attention to the fact that Knight made an attempt to "dump" Nixon from the Republican national ticket last year.

Wild Streak By Cub Hurlers In 9th Gives Cardinals 3-2 Victory

CHICAGO (AP)—With the bases loaded in the ninth inning, Dick Littlefield served a walk that forced Eddie Kasko home with the winning run to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 3-2 decision over the Chicago Cubs Saturday.

The gift run preserved victory for Herm Wehmeier, boosting his record to 7-6. The 30-year-old right-hander yielded three hits, including Cal Neeman's single and Bobby Adams' homer in the third inning for the Cubs' only run.

Triando Starts Orioles To 4-1 Win Over Boston

BALTIMORE (AP)—Gus Triandos' crazily bouncing ground ball in the fifth inning went for an inside the park home run, breaking a scoreless deadlock, and starting the Orioles toward a 4-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday night.

Triandos scored on what looked like a single down the third base line, but the ball took a freakish ricochet down the wall like a pool ball on the rail and into left field with Ted Williams in frantic pursuit. Before the Boston outfielder could pick up the ball and get it back, Triandos was home.

The Orioles added the deciding three in the eighth before the Red Sox could score on Harold (Skinny) Brown in the last inning. Boston got only five hits off Brown. One of them was a single by Williams in three times up officially. It dropped Williams' American League leadership to 3765, an infinitesimal margin over Mickey Mantle of the New York Yankees.

Mantle didn't play Saturday night because of sore legs and his average stayed at .3764.

Rev. Bob Richards May Surrender Amateur Status

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Rev. Bob Richards, two-time Olympic pole vaulting champion, may surrender his amateur status to do a sports show on television for the Union Oil Co., it was learned Saturday.

C. A. Finnell, the company's public relations and advertising director here, said the deal is in the talking stage.

It is believed that such a program would be a breach of Richards' amateur status if he were to receive money for the program, Finnell said Richards would be compensated.

Finnell said the program would be aimed at youth and would be telecast in the 11 Western states.

Richards, who has cleared 15 feet more times than any other vaulter, lives in La Verne, east of Los Angeles.

THAT'S WHY HE'S BOSS

OLEAN, N. Y. (AP)—The Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday know their new coach, Buddy Parker, means business.

In his first meeting with the team Friday, Parker, the former coach of the Detroit Lions, said he was glad to be their new coach and added:

"We are here to win and anyone who doesn't feel that way can leave now. That's all boys."

LOGAN READY TO PLAY

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Starting Johnny Logan's scheduled departure for Cincinnati Saturday to rejoin the National League leading Milwaukee Braves has been put back until Monday.

Just before he was to leave, Logan was examined by the team physician and it was necessary to take a stitch in his injured right shin.

The club said it was nothing serious, but advised Logan to wait until Labor Day before reporting to Manager Fred Haney at Chicago.

Logan was hurt in a game Aug. 14.

Mrs. E. Paulsel To Conduct Gray Lady Training

Mrs. Earl Paulsel, volunteer field consultant for the St. Louis Area, will conduct a Gray Lady Training course to be held at the Red Cross office, 201 E. Morgan street, on Friday, September 13, at 1 p.m. Anyone interested in this program may contact Mrs. Carroll Houston, Red Cross executive director, by calling CH 5-8729.

One of the most important phases of the American Red Cross is the Gray Lady Service. The success of this Gray Lady Service depends primarily upon the volunteer who trains the Gray Ladies. To be a Gray Lady does not require rare qualities but it does call for special ones. Volunteers of this Service are chosen because they have understanding, patience, cheerfulness and sensitivity to the feelings and reactions of others. When they are trained and placed in assignments that will make a high degree of service and satisfaction to be expected.

These special qualities are then applied when gray ladies are visiting in the hospital and giving personal service.

A certified statement from a physician is required to meet health qualifications and this must be presented at the first training period.

There will be hospital training at Passavant Hospital on September 17 and September 24.

The Jacksonville State Hospital will have an orientation on Thursday, September 19.

TO TRAIN FOR THE RURAL MINISTRY

Bob and Pat Walker soon will leave 349 W. Beecher avenue, where they have made their home for the past 20 months while he served as assistant farm adviser in Morgan county.

Bob will enroll this month at Dubuque Theological Seminary, Presbyterian training school on the west bank of the Mississippi river. Now 32 years old, he will begin religious training with intense hopes of becoming a rural pastor.

"I've been considering the change for several years," he says. "But this past summer I decided. I feel that the need for rural pastors is obvious and I feel I can do it."

His wife agrees with him. Both are devoted church workers and were members of First Presbyterian church in Jacksonville.

They Met At Church
They first met at a church activity in Champaign while they were students at the University of Illinois. Pat's folks lived there and Bob was a farm boy from Clinton, DeWitt county.

After three years in the army, he graduated from the College of Agriculture in 1949 and began operating his father's farm near Clinton the same year. She was a home economics graduate in 1951 and they were married a week after she got her diploma.

At Dubuque Bob will be on the campus for one semester. Then the plans are that he will be assigned to a rural church in the Tri-State area, a hundred miles more or less from Dubuque in Illinois, Iowa or Missouri.

There'll be a manse furnished and some salary.

"We're not much interested in money," Pat declared.

Then, for another two and a half years, Bob will commute to the seminary to continue his studies. He'll attend classes from Tuesday morning until Friday noon, ordinarily. If he gets a church that requires more work at home, it may take him five or six years to get his theological degree.

Will Feel At Home
"We won't be out of place at the campus," he observed. The average age of the students is 30 years and 80% of them are married. We'll get along fine."

The Dubuque Seminary is the Presbyterian main station for the development of pastors to serve in rural areas. It is affiliated with Iowa State College of Agriculture, which sends instructors to Dubuque to teach farming methods and agrarian life. Bob will be permitted to skip these classes—unless he's called in from time to time to teach special phases of agriculture.

Bob, in his quiet and dignified way, has strengthened the 4-H club program in the county and has revived the Rural Youth organization. He'll be greatly missed by his friends—who wish him the best in his new, dedicated endeavor.

Shown in the photo are Pat; John, a native of Jacksonville as he was born here just 18 months ago; Bob, and Kathy, 3.

This Week.. at Dixon Springs

Last week in this column we suggested shaping the walls of a trench silo to a slope of one foot for every four feet of silo depth. The reason was to save feed along the side walls. In a wedge-shaped structure the forage, in settling, packs tightly against the walls, keeping air out.

Silo Size
Silo sizes and dimensions will vary with the number of animals to be fed. In summer feeding particularly it is important that the depth and width of silo conform to herd size so that the silage face can be removed fast enough to keep spoilage to a minimum. To meet this requirement, at least a three-inch silage must be fed off daily. For beef herds of 25 cows or more, a silo 8 feet deep, 12 feet wide at the bottom and 16 feet wide at the top will permit most efficient feeding summer or winter.

A daily feeding of 40 pounds of silage per beef cow is a generous amount. So two tons of silage is enough for a 100-day wintering period. That is the amount that can be stored in each foot of length in a silo 8 feet deep, 12 feet wide at the bottom and 16 feet wide at the top. For a 30-cow herd you will need a silo 30 feet long; and for a 50-cow herd, 50 feet long. However, a dairy cow will need about twice as much silage as a beef cow.

Small Herds
Beef herds smaller than 25 cows will not eat fast enough from a silo of the above dimensions. For the small herds, a silo 6 feet deep, 8 feet wide at the bottom and 11 feet wide at the top is desirable. With this size every 2 feet of length will hold approximately 2 tons. So, for a 10-cow herd, build a silo 20 feet long; and for a 20-cow herd, 40 feet long.

Guide Figures
These approximate figures will help you plan your building or storage needs and serve as guides for crop needs:
Corn silage yields, per acre—10 tons. Self-feed silage ration, beef cow—80 lbs. Daily silage ration, beef cow—40 lbs. Daily silage ration, calf—25 lbs. Weight of silage per cubic foot—35 lbs.

Although the 1957 hay acreage is the lowest since 1948, production of 119 million tons brings the per acre yield to a record high, says the USDA.

Illinois Farmers Outlook Letter

HIGHER EGG PRICES AHEAD

Prices of eggs are likely to rise more than usual this fall, then continue at profitable levels through 1958.

The egg producing business seems to run in a two-year cycle—good, poor years—good year—poor year—etc. Prices have been low during the past 12 months. They seem likely to be much higher in the next 12 months.

Farmers cut down on the purchase of chicks for laying flock replacements last spring. This points to smaller laying flocks, reduced egg production, and higher prices.

Farmers are raising an estimated 304 million young chickens this year, 18 per cent less than last. (This figure does not include commercial broiler production. The estimate is based on reports received by the USDA from farmers, crop reporters, and commercial hatcheries.)

All sections of the country are cutting production of chickens for laying flock replacements. The decrease is greatest on farms that had small flocks. Many former small flock owners are raising none this year.

30 Million Shrink

Illinois farmers are reducing egg production more than farmers in most other states. Illinois farmers are raising 28 per cent fewer chickens in 1957 than in 1956. This indicates that our farmers may have better alternative uses for their labor than farmers in many other areas. Illinois farmers, who raised 47 million chickens in 1943, are raising only 17 million this year.

If egg prices rise rapidly, farmers will hold over more hens than last year, but not enough more to offset the big cut in pullet numbers.

Egg production will probably drop below year-before levels during the last quarter of this year, and remain below for about 12 months.

By January 1 the nation's laying flock is expected to be 6 to 8 per cent smaller than it was a year before. The average rate of lay increases slightly, but egg production seems likely to fall 4 to 6 per cent short of year-before levels. This reduction, plus a small increase in consumer demand, should allow much better prices than those of last winter.

Broilers
Broiler production leveled off for a few weeks but is increasing again. This will tend to prevent any improvement in prices. Prices may slip again when consumer demand slackens with cooler weather.

Turkeys
Turkey production this year is about 5 per cent larger than in 1956. Over 80 million of the big birds are being raised this year. Storage stocks of turkey on June 1 of 91 million pounds, compared with 41 million a year before. The holiday birds will be available to consumers at attractive prices before Thanksgiving and Christmas, but prices paid to farmers may rise slightly by December.

New Rodent Bait Found Effective For Rats, Mice

People of this area, particularly farmers, will be interested to know there is a new chemical weapon on the market to kill rats and mice. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service research laboratory says it will do the job more effectively and with less trouble than anything offered before.

The product is called Diphacin ('pronounced "die-fas-in"). It gets its name from a remarkable new toxic chemical, diphacinone.

Diphacin is a development of Niagara Chemical Division, Middeport, New York. Niagara is known throughout all agricultural districts as one of the largest producers of insecticides, fungicides and weed killers. Their entry into the rodenticide market came through laboratory perfection of the new chemical, diphacinone.

Effects Blood Stream
Simply stated, Diphacin kills rats and mice by inducing a degenerative effect into the rodent's blood stream, thus sickening the pests and usually causing death within five to seven days.

There are prepared rat baits similar in action and purpose to Diphacin already on the market. However, the effectiveness of these baits when stale has left something to be desired—also they require messy handling and many, particularly housewives, shy away from contact with poisonous materials.

Niagara, in packaging their product, has overcome both of these objections to prepared rat bait. It is vacuum packed to insure freshness right up to the time of use. Further, the can is so designed that by pressing in a marked area with the thumbs, it becomes a self-feeding bait station.

"Most Active"
The U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service report that rat populations are on the increase and that stringent control measures are required. In summarizing preliminary findings, the Fish and Wildlife Service Research Laboratory at Denver, Colorado, reported that "Diphacinone definitely is the most active anticoagulant, per unit weight, proposed for rodenticide use." Additional tests have borne out the toxicity promise of this statement and resulted in the decision by Niagara Chemical to market Diphacin as a faster, easier and cleaner way to dispose of rats and mice.

Fine Fall Apple Crop In Western Illinois Counties

Southern Illinois apple growers are beginning harvest of a fall apple crop that should exceed 2,000,000 bushels before the harvest is complete. Ideal weather conditions of the past few months and particularly the cool nights these past few weeks give promise of exceptionally fine fruit quality and size. Jonathans are now being harvested in limited volume in Southern Illinois with growers expecting to move into full volume Jonathan harvest by Sept. 10. Jonathans will be followed by Golden Delicious, Starking, Red Delicious, Rome Beauty, Stayman, Turley, Winesap, Willow Twig and a number of other popular varieties.

With some growers now harvesting Jonathan in Southern Illinois it appears that the season is a few days earlier than normal. The harvesting period will extend from now until late October in Northern Illinois with all areas of the state reporting a near full crop in all orchards. Northern Illinois growers in the Rock Island, Peoria, Chicago area have one of the finest crops grown in several years.

Growers in the area of Adams, Pike, Jersey, Calhoun counties and other areas on the same latitude across the state also report an exceptionally fine crop. Southern Illinois growers indicate that their crop will be a little below normal in volume but will be of fine quality. Volume might be increased by fine sized fruit.

A dairy extension specialist at the University of Illinois says that silage feeding quality depends as much on the way the silo is filled as on the forage you put in it.

Report Banner Crops Throughout Nebraska

Nebraska, a great agricultural state and the "Beef State" according to its automobile license plates, has been suffering from drought for the past five years. But 1957 has completely reversed this trend. Rainfall well above normal has produced bountiful crops.

Nebraska's corn crop is expected to average 36 bushels per acre this year for the second largest crop in history. Dryland corn is good for the first time in several years and more land is under irrigation now than ever. For the past two years, the total irrigated corn crop in Nebraska has been more than that of all dryland corn, but it is doubtful whether that situation will exist this year.

Much Irrigation

Nebraska is the leading state in irrigation wells with about 20,000 in operation. Each well can irrigate 60 to 80 acres of corn. The great "Sand Hills" area in Northwest Nebraska acts as a sponge to absorb water, which spreads under the rest of the state to give it the greatest underground water supply in the nation. In the dry season a year ago, new irrigation wells were being drilled at the rate of 100 per month, but since the rains started early this year, that rate has slowed down.

Nebraska is a feeder cattle supplier to many Corn Belt states. "Sand Hills" cattle are noted for quality and vigor. This year's rainfall in the "Sand Hills" has been as much as 10 inches above normal resulting in wonderful pasture and prairie hay. Corn Belt feeders will have to pay more for their range cattle this year as the producer of them has abundant feed.

Nebraska is also the leading alfalfa state with the biggest hay crop in history this year. A great deal of this goes through the alfalfa dryers and emerges as a rich green meal full of protein and vitamins as an ingredient of mixed livestock feeds.

Wheat was a big Nebraska crop this year. Yields were high and quality good except in Western Nebraska where heavy rains at harvest lowered quality and test weight.

September is the best month for reseeding grass waterways.

MORGAN COUNTY FARM BUREAU
EVERY MEMBER URGED TO BE THERE

Combines Alter View Of Countryside-Now No Stacks Of Straw

By ARTHUR THATCHER
JERSEYVILLE — Among the objects that have almost completely disappeared from the farm landscape in this part of Illinois, as a result of the present system of harvesting crops with mechanized equipment, are the wheat stacks, straw stacks and ricks of hay.

The wheat stacks arose after the cutting period on many farms where the farmer did not thresh his grain from the shock, more than a half century ago. Wheat in the stack went through a "sweat," and usually the sample of grain from a stack of threshed wheat was superior to that threshed from the shocks in the field.

The stacking of wheat became a competitive art among men trained in such work 60 years ago. A number of men in every farming community made the stacking of wheat a sort of profession, and there was much competition when it came to building the neatest stack with the best bulge to turn the seasonal rains that followed.

Very Few Left

Of the men who knew how to stack wheat more than a half century ago, very few remain alive in the locality. James Campbell of Jerseyville, who is 95 years old, recalled last week he used to stack wheat when he was a young man residing in the country near this city.

Campbell recalled the time when the first binders came into use and wire was used for binding the bundles. It was necessary to clip the wire with a special clipping device as the sheaves were being fed into the separators of that period. Later came the twine binder, and the cutting of bands with a special cutting knife as the bundles were pitched onto the cutting board in front of the mouth of the separator. Bundles were pitched onto the cutting board from both sides, and a band cutter stood in position to sever the twine band with his knife. Between the two men cutting bands stood the man who fed the bundles into the mouth of the separator.

It Was Hard Work
Feeding the separator was a task for a real "he" man, particularly so when the heat waves of July and August struck the locality. Usually there were two feeders following each threshing rig who shared the feeding work by operating in relays of an hour or so each.

Farmers considered there was an additional advantage of threshing from the stack instead of from the shock. It required much less help for the stack job. In shock threshing it required eight to twelve bundle wagons for transporting the wheat from the shock in the field to the threshing machine. It was customary to have one pitcher in the field for each two bundle wagons. By stacking the wheat before threshing, this large quota of bundle wagon drivers and pitchers was no longer required.

During the stacking of wheat, two bundle wagons and one pitcher in the field could keep the bundles at the stacking site fast enough to keep average wheat stacker busy.

Before The Blower
Before the advent of the "cyclone" or wind stacker, the wheat straw was stacked by men as it was threshed and came from the separator. In some threshing outfits, a separate machine operating by a belt from the separator elevated the straw to the growing stack. Stacking straw at the end of a separator was a dusty, chaffy job and men willing to work in the heat of such a task received extra pay.

The wheat as it came from the separator was measured and put into two bushel sacks. "Bucking" sacks was another job about a threshing rig that required a stout back. The wheat of that era was hauled in the sack via wagon and team to the elevators. Later the tight wagon box began taking the place of the bucking program, and wheat was hauled to the elevator dump unsacked.

He is a charter member of the society, chairman of the editorial board of its magazine, the Journal of Soil and Water Conservation, and currently a member of the organization's national council. He has written many articles in the fields of soil and water conservation.

Although the 1957 hay acreage is the lowest since 1948, production of 119 million tons brings the per acre yield to a record high, says the USDA.

Produces Faster, More Effective Kill

Like many who live in areas where rats are a problem, you may doubt that rodents can be controlled, much less eliminated, with poisoned rat bait. But Diphacin (pronounced "Die-Fas-In") is not just another anticoagulant rat bait. It's a new, scientific approach to the entire problem of rodent control. It's made with a potent new chemical discovery called Diphacin—completely clean, odorless and tasteless—it's vacuum packed to stay fresh. And it's a product of Niagara Chemical, an old and respected formulator of insecticides and other pesticides used around the farm and home.

the hard-to-kill rats—without arousing their suspicions.

Vacuum Pack Insures Freshness

When you open a tin of Diphacin there's a reassuring "whosh" to tell you that this bait is vacuum packed to stay fresh. Research has shown that much of today's prepared rat bait goes stale before it is used. Rats are smart—they won't eat stale or rancid food. So, unless you use a fresh bait, such as Diphacin, you can't and won't get the results you expect, no matter how effective the poison.

Made with Choice Wholesome Foods

With a vacuum pack to insure freshness, choice food-stuffs are used in Diphacin than is possible in ordinary packaged baits. Diphacin has a taste lure that particularly appeals to rodents yet it is approved safe to use around your buildings.

Package Also Serves as Bait Station (See above and below) where rats and mice travel, and watch results.

There's no fuse, muss or hazard when you bait your premises with Diphacin—no need to handle, no need to build special feeding stations. Each vacuum packed can of Diphacin, when opened (see illustration), becomes a self-service bait station. Just place several of these tins adjacent to feed bins, chicken houses or other areas

A Big Family Day

Along with the lace curtain in the front window, Labor Day has been remodeled with the passage of time.

The lace curtain is now a pinched, pleated, tailored drapery. The front window itself has evolved into a wall of glass called a "picture window."

There is little in this land of ours which hasn't felt the hand of change and this holiday is no exception.

Labor Day was first advocated by the now almost-forgotten Knights of Labor, a once-great labor organization. The mass demonstrations were proposed in the campaign to "check the unjust accumulation of great wealth, which is inevitably leading to the pauperization and hopeless degradation of the toiling masses."

The holiday grew out of a stormy period of labor strife between 1883 and 1886. Several worker parades were held on the date and then it was recommended that the first Monday in September be observed as a great labor holiday annually. Colorado was the first state to make it a legal holiday. Other states quickly followed.

At the beginning it was a mailed fist upraised by labor in its first self-consciousness. There's little reflection of this nowadays.

Just what does Labor Day mean to moderns?

First and foremost it is a day off which neatly brackets the summer, with Memorial Day at the start and Labor Day as the conclusion.

It's a nicely placed day, always coming on Monday. It's a good opportunity—not too long or too short—to make an intercity trip to visit relatives. It can give dad a long weekend to go up to the cottage, pack up the family and bring them home. And by counting the number of persons who flock to beaches, parks and playgrounds—or hold picnics in their back yards—it is one of the great seasonal waves of sun worshiping.

Second, Labor Day is the doorstep to school. Either the following day or within a week or so, our national machine is slipped into a different gear.

All our lives change as the public schools are thronged by our junior citizens exercising their right to receive an education. Alarm clocks ring earlier and even the pattern of traffic on our streets changes.

As an echo from the past, Labor Day brings a spate of statements from professional labor people about the rights and honor of the humble working man. Some cities have parades. But only long memories can summon up the processions and the oratorical din which heralded yesterday's Labor Days.

In truth, Labor Day—like so much in America—has become a symbol of moving ahead toward the pleasant life. No longer is it a day for emphasizing the battle between two classes in our nation. Odd, that this day born of force should become a great family day. Odd, but meaningful.

"It is only through labor and painful effort, by grim energy and resolute courage, that we move on to better things," Theodore Roosevelt once said.

And gradually, Labor Day has come to symbolize the type of labor he was talking about. Labor Day honors all of us, in this day and age. By the very frivolous approach we take that it is a day dedicated—as little as we realize it—to all of us who are building our nation into something so great that it couldn't have been imagined in 1883.

This day is not only for the carpenter, the bricklayer, the ones who physically build or labor with their hands. It is for office workers, for errand boys, for foremen, for clerks, for button pushers and switch snappers.

It is for the mothers who strive to develop strong sons. It is for dads who deprive themselves so that their children may have better educations. It is a special day for the children themselves—and don't they enjoy their last crack at summer?—since they are the builders of the future.

Labor Day has gradually become, without our noticing it, a day for all of us, the true builders. And we hope you will enjoy it tomorrow.

In Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD — To the confirmed devotee of the bellylaugh, a man like Hal Kanter is a welcome addition to the entertainment scene.

I must confess that I am an advocate of the bellylaugh. Not the grin, the titter, the giggle or the chuckle, but the kind of laugh that comes from deep down and is able to rock the room.

That sort of laugh came in the slapstick days of silent films, in the wacky comedies of the 30s and even in the early days of TV, before the familiarity bred boredom.

Kanter helped provide at least two classic laugh-getting TV shows — Ed Wynn's hilarious half-hour series years back and George Gobel's first two seasons.

Kanter has now turned to movies, directing the new comedy team of Rowan and Martin in "Once Upon A Horse," asked if he would ever return to TV, he said:

"I am returning — to put on a spectacular with Rowan and Martin for NBC, but as to returning on a steady basis, I don't know."

He finds the movies more satisfying as far as comedy is concerned. He said he is doing some things in "Once Upon A Horse" that haven't been done in films for years — knock-down fights in which bodies fly through walls, a fighter whose head disappears, then pops up out of his collar, etc.

There lies the difference between TV and movie comedy, he pointed out. Except for a few bits of simple slapstick — pies, Seltzer bottles, etc. — TV comedy relies mostly on words.

"You can't time sight gags on TV," Kanter said. "You can't be sure that your business will come off at the right time."

Movie comedy can rely on both word and action, thus achieving the fullest potential — namely, the bellylaugh.

... And Well-Deserved

By DOUGLAS LARSEN
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Secretary of the Army Wilber Brucker was astonished to see a letter from a 10-year-old girl cross his desk asking him politely "for a recipe for a bomb."

The request was from Michigan, Brucker's home state, which may have moved him to give the request his full attention.

Her letter frankly admitted, "Both my mother and father think I'm crazy in asking for this."

Secretary Brucker was inclined to agree with the girl's parents. However, his reply gently suggested that there are "nicer things" for a 10-year-old girl to play with, and that she was "really too young" to be playing with high explosives.

WHAT EVER ELSE ANYONE might call Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, nobody will ever accuse him of being a "looter." That's the term used for persons who have a habit of bringing tons of gifts and souvenirs back from overseas trips.

In spite of the fact he does more international commuting than almost any other U.S. citizen, he never takes time to shop or look for bargains to bring home.

This question came up at a recent embassy reception where somebody asked Mrs. Dulles about all the wonderful things her husband must bring home from his trips.

"If he does any shopping abroad, I don't know about it," she said.

A NEW ERA in diplomatic relations between the U.S. and Spain may be in the offing. Senator Jamie Alba, new counselor just assigned to the Spanish embassy, is said to be one of the best amateur golfers in Europe.

Friends are arranging some matches between Alba and Ike. Ike doesn't rate himself a great golfer but he gets a kick out of playing with the great ones.

Mrs. Alba is also rated one of the best female golfers in Spain. If she gets into one of the matches with the President it won't be played at Ike's Burning Tree course. No women are allowed there. They aren't even permitted in the clubhouse.

In addition to their golfing talents, the Albas are tops as party throwers.

There are some things no smart wife ever reminds her husband of when others are present. Such as: How she kept him from making a mistake, or tried to, only he wouldn't listen to her.

That it was her money that paid for this or that.

That her family was set against their marrying.

That the man she almost married is now Mr. Big, the inference being that if she had married the other man she would be on Easy Street.

That the couple couldn't get by without her pay check.

That if she hadn't married she would have had a fabulous career.

That the only reason the family gets by on her husband's pay check is because she is such an excellent manager.

That she hasn't had a new dress in ages or that the dress she is wearing came from a bargain basement.

HE'S HELPLESS

That her husband always consults her before making any kind of decision.

That she is Mrs. Fit-It for the family because her husband can't hammer a nail without hitting his thumb.

That her husband's boss doesn't appreciate him enough to pay him what he is worth.

That her husband is the "biggest baby in the world" when he is sick and thinks he is dying if he gets a head cold.

That her husband's family are a trial and tribulation to her.

That her husband—big laugh—is a sucker for any kind of hair tonic that promises to help him hold onto what hair he has left.

That she doesn't know what her husband, poor dear, would ever do without her.

Bomb 'Recipe'—Dulles No 'Looter'—Alba vs. Ike—Queen's Dieting—Minnesota Plug—Healthy Ezra

PROGRESS REPORT on planning for the visit of England's Queen Elizabeth II here in October:

"News that the Queen has put herself on a rigid diet to try to drop 10 pounds temporarily put officials in charge of menus for the visit into a flap. At first they decided to change ice cream to lower-calorie sherbet."

Then someone pointed out that the reason she was going on a diet was to prepare for all the rich food she would be exposed to during the visit. So they put ice cream back on the menu.

THIS EXCERPT from the Congressional Record reveals how tension mounts during the dying days of a hot session:

"Senator Humphrey (D-Minn.): I ask unanimous consent that the article referred to (about the joys of driving in Minnesota) be printed in the body of the Record and invite my colleagues to enjoy this wonderful tour of the north country."

"Senator Douglas (D-Ill.): Mr. President, every year the Senator from Minnesota rises and gives a travel talk on behalf of his state. I have never seen any group of people who take so much credit for what the Lord has done for them."

THE PRESIDING OFFICER: Without objection, the propaganda of the Senator from Minnesota will be printed in the Record."

REPORTERS ATTENDING the first press conference Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson had after he had been out of town for 49 straight days were convinced that he'd been away on a muscle-building program.

He stood at the door and greeted every newsmen with a handshake powerful enough to crush black walnuts.

"You must have discovered some new super-vitamin food, Mr. Secretary," one reporter said, shaking his hand in mock pain. "Just healthy living," the secretary said.

The World Today

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON — First stumbling block for the Eisenhower administration—as soon as the civil rights bill becomes law—is in setting up the commission to study civil rights problems.

The bill calls for the President to appoint a six-man bipartisan commission to do that. Commission members are subject to approval by the Senate.

The commission also will need money to operate.

But Congress was expected to adjourn today. So it will have no time at this session to vote the money or approve the commission members, who won't be named until after President Eisenhower signs the bill. Congress won't be able to act on these matters until it returns in January.

That could mean a delay of months in getting the commission set up and working.

Eisenhower could appoint an interim commission to get it started fast—and then hope his selection of the six men would get Senate approval. But he probably won't.

And no doubt he could provide money for its operations—until Congress gets around to voting money for it next year out of special presidential funds. He probably won't.

For one thing, Eisenhower has to look around for prospective commission members who will draw a minimum of opposition when it comes time for Senate consideration of their nominations. Senate Southerners will certainly scrutinize Eisenhower's selections carefully.

Even then—since they're opposed to the civil rights bill anyway—the Southerners may do their best to block his nominees, no matter who they are, to delay as long as possible start of the commission's work.

If Eisenhower did set up an interim commission, it would certainly anger the Southerners. And it could antagonize other senators. They might feel he tried to take advantage of Congress' absence to get the commission into motion.

The key man in whatever the gates will be his staff director. The bill instructs the president to name this director, who also is subject to Senate approval.

But Eisenhower can't appoint a staff director until he appoints the commission. The reason: the bill says the President must consult with the commission members on prospective nominees for staff director.

When the commission is finally in business, it will have two years to do its work.

Each commission member is to be paid $50 a day for each day he puts in, plus $12 a day for subsistence. The staff director is to get $2,500 a year. In addition, money will be needed to pay the staff and the expenses of its investigations.

Under the bill, the President also will appoint a new assistant attorney general in the Justice Department to head up a new civil rights division. The department now has only a civil rights section in the criminal division.

The new assistant attorney general also would be subject to Senate approval. The President could probably appoint him on an interim basis and ask Senate approval when Congress returns.

But Eisenhower may wait until Congress does come back next year. Meanwhile, the civil rights section can handle civil rights problems, particularly in voting rights cases.

The bill says the attorney general can step in—getting a court order if necessary—to stop violations of voting rights. What the administration does about this will show how earnest it is in carrying out the new law.

The attorney general probably will not start action in the cases of some few individual Negroes who have been prevented from voting. Instead, it probably will pick some Southern county where masses of Negroes have been interfered with in voting.

When will it start doing this? Perhaps the administration doesn't know the answer to that one right now.

Happy Times

You'll Retire at 70?

Don't—It's Too Late

By BEULAH STOWE

Meet Henry S., 70, who retired six months ago as a vice president of a corporation.

He's wealthy. With his pension plan payments from the company plus income from his investments, he makes only $3,000 a year less than he made with the corporation, since income taxes claimed so much of his whopping salary.

He's blessed with money and time. But he finds that the time hangs very heavy on his hands. He finds that the old friends at his office and contacts in allied work are polite to him when he stops to see them—but they are also busy. He won't visit anymore.

So Mr. S. spends his mornings at the country club playing golf. His afternoons are spent at the country club, eating and drinking and playing bridge. He has gained 40 pounds in six months. He's fat, unhealthy and unhappy.

Mr. S. quit work too late and he neglected to give any thought whatever to retirement ahead of time.

Mr. S. could take $2,000 out of the bank and set up a fine wood-working shop in his basement. He could buy a cabin on a lake and spend time and energy in developing it. He could find a cause to live for—a hospital, a boys' club, a home for old people. He could work for a master's or doctor's degree at a university.

But it is difficult at 70 to stop work and discover new interests. The spirit of adventure isn't what it was earlier.

Q—"My wife and I have always lived in a rented apartment. I am 61, and expect to retire at 65. Our friends tell us we are crazy but we would like a little house of our own to putter around in when retirement comes. We have almost $20,000 in savings and investments, and will have, at 65, my pension and Social Security which will total $283 a month. Are we crazy?"

A—"Nope. Just different. The more usual pattern in retirement is to unload property, not acquire it. If you buy a house, buy a one-story, easy-to-care-for house that will fit your needs in the future. You don't need to invest all of your $20,000 in a house. You can make a down payment and assume a monthly mortgage payment which will fit within your income. Save half of that $20,000 for emergencies, medical needs, luxuries and rainy days. The FHA program now offers liberal financial terms to elderly (past 60) homeowners, and you can apply for a loan through your bank or lending agency. Write to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D.C., and request the booklet called "Housing for the Elderly," to learn how FHA helps. Send 15 cents."

Fruits for Repentance

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

When John the Baptist came from the wilderness calling upon the Jews to "bring forth fruits meet for repentance" (Matthew 3:8), he was emphasizing a recurring need in the lives of individuals and peoples.

Individuals, in fact, may grow in grace and knowledge (II Peter 3:18), and the path of the just may be as the shining light "that shineth more and more unto the perfect day," but among nations and peoples the course of history has seldom been one of steady progress.

It has almost invariably been that of lapses and reformations, of periods of the dominance of evil and corruption until startling events, or some commanding voice of leadership, or both, have aroused an awakened conscience and induced an era of repentance and reform.

The periods of the predominance of good, or of evil, are emphasized in contrast by the immediacy with which one may succeed the other.

This interaction of periods of good and evil had its most

Pike Co. Couple Marks Fiftieth Wedding Date

PITTSFIELD—A family picnic dinner is being arranged at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Burbridge Sunday honoring the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mrs. Burbridge's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Marshall, who were married on August 30, 1907 in St. Louis.

They have spent all of their married life in Pittsfield. Mr. Marshall (known to his friends as Pete) was associated with the late Guy Carleton in the poultry business for a number of years, and later maintained his own trucking service. He has been retired for the past few years.

Mrs. Marshall was Miss Mabel Kelsey before her marriage. They are the parents of two daughters, Mrs. Gene Burbridge (Aline) of Pittsfield and Mrs. Jeff Hiner (Margaret) of Atlantic, Iowa.

Sunday will be a great day for the Marshalls, with all the folks at home. Aline with her husband and three children, Margaret and her husband and children and grandchildren. Mr. Marshall's brother Al Marshall and wife of Ellisville, Missouri, their children and grandchildren, and Mr. Marshall's sister, Mrs. Edward Schuster, and husband and their family of Peoria are expected to attend the dinner.

While the widely known couple are not holding open house for the occasion of their fiftieth anniversary, they are glad to welcome their friends in their home at any time.

PLASTER IN PASTELS

OMAHA (AP) — And what color cast would you like on your broken ankle, Miss?

That's the new question for children treated for fractures at Children's Memorial Hospital in Omaha.

Doctors say that colors appeal to children and keep casts cleaner looking. The opportunity to choose also provides a psychological lift and distraction from the pain of bone setting.

The first of these chromatic masterpieces went to 10-year-old Susan Grier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Grier of Omaha. A bicycle tumble fractured her right arm.

"I chose cerise because it sounded so pretty," she explained and then she commented, "I'll have to be careful to wear dresses that go well with cerise."

"SET BREAKER" — Rossano Brazzi, the Italian heart-throb, declares he has learned to control his fiery Latin temper and is a "reformed set breaker." Time was, when things went wrong, he'd smash up the set. Above, he's pictured on the Hawaiian island of Kauai, where he's playing one of the most romantic roles ever written—that of Emile de Beque in the movie "South Pacific."

ANOTHER BURGEOO FAN IN THE MAKING

IMMIGRANTS TO BURGEOOLAND soon sort themselves into two groups: those who are crazy about the soup and those who can't stand it. This denies the oft-repeated claim that "You have to be raised on burgoo before you can get crazy about it."

Fredric Guthrie, 15 months old, is starting out young on the road toward being a burgoo fan. He's the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Guthrie, 1493 Passavant Court, Jacksonville.

The paradox of liking or disliking burgoo is demonstrated by them.

He was born in Peoria, but came down to Jacksonville each summer to visit his grandad and grandma, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Vasconcellos. The grandfather was the soupmaker at the Westminster church burgoo for years.

"Grandfather broke me into liking burgoo," Guthrie says.

But he married a Peoria girl and brought her down to introduce her to burgooland and she became a fan right away. They don't miss many burgoo picnics in Morgan and Scott counties.

The photo shows the future burgoo addict getting a spoonful of soup as made by Russell Hymes of the Arcadia neighborhood as Papa flashes his best smile for the benefit of the photographer — and anybody else who might look at this page.

KISSING GOURAMIS

By Ray Broekel

Before we go any further, let it be said right here that these fishes don't go around kissing each other, even though it looks like it.

Ichthyologists, (scientists who study fishes) haven't found out yet why these Gouramis have the peculiar habit that they have, so as yet it cannot be scientifically explained.

Kissing Gouramis go under the scientific name of Helostoma temminckii. They come from a wide area in the eastern world, the Malay region, Java, Borneo, etc. If given enough growing room in an aquarium they can reach the length of one foot, although the more common aquarium size of three to four inches is more general.

Most Gouramis are egg-layers and build bubble-nests. The females lay from 200 to 2,000 eggs at one spawning. Kissing Gouramis don't build bubble-nests as most other Gouramis. The eggs are just allowed to float at the top of the water where the young hatch out in a day or so.

Eats Small Fish
The color of this fish is a solid white-pink. It behaves itself well in the aquarium providing the other fishes are about its own size. If there are much smaller fishes in the tank, however, it might be tempted to make a meal of them.

If you wish to keep Kissing Gouramis, it would perhaps be wisest to keep only one in a community tank.

Taken From A Diary Of 120 Years Ago

Buchanan's Hostess

March 4th, 1857, just one hundred years ago James Buchanan, the Bachelor president came to the White House and he had his niece, the glamorous Harriet Lane as his hostess who wore a simple white costume trimmed with artificial flowers and the same kind in her hair, also lovely pearls as her only jewels.

At the final reception she wore a magnificent white satin gown, but she was graceful in every gown, and at this reception the Marine Band played "Listen to the Mocking Bird" as the famous song was dedicated to her.

Mrs. Fillmore
At the time Millard Fillmore became president, his wife Abigail Powers Fillmore was not well enough to be with him, but their daughter, Mary Abigail, was the hostess for the White House. The most memorable thing that took place was the singing of Jenny Lind at the White House during his administration.

Mrs. Lincoln
At President Lincoln's inaugural in 1861 Mrs. Lincoln wore a gown made by her ex-slave, Elizabeth Keckly. The gown was brilliant magenta-rose sort of an antique moire and her jewels were a pearl necklace, earrings and bracelets. She also wore white Japonica in her hair, and carried a bouquet. She plunged into Washington society and at the end of Lincoln's first term of office she owed $27,000 for clothes.

After Lincoln's death she moved to Chicago and eighteen of her gowns were put up for sale, also a bolt of point lace at $4,000, a point lace shawl at $2,000, a camel's hair shawl at $1,500 and some smaller items but very few of them were sold.

Mrs. Grant
At General Grant's Inaugural Ball, March 4th, 1869, Mrs. Julia Dent Grant wore a beautiful gown of white satin and point lace with pearl and diamond ornaments. Two weddings took place while the Grants were in the White House. The first was when the popular Nellie Grant was married to Alanson Sartoris and she wore an ivory satin gown with point lace estimated as costing between $1500 and $2000.

Soon after Nellie was married, her brother married Miss Ida Monroe and the wedding was given by her sister, Mrs. Potter Palmer

EMPORIUM

Let's Go Birding

LITTLE SEWING MACHINE

By Emma Mae Leonhard

Sometime ago we gave you readers an article about snipes and "snipe-hunting." Perhaps some people call all those ground-colored birds with very long bills and very short tails snipes, and in a way they are.

Then we have three kinds of snipes in our area. First of all, you bird watchers should notice their habitat.

If such a bird is flushed from a woodland swamp or leafy thicket and flies away on a straight course, giving a whistling sound as it starts, it is probably a Woodcock. If it is flushed from the boggy margins of streams and marshes and flies away in a zigzag fashion, it is probably a Wilson's Snipe.

If, however, this snipe is seen on the mud flats or open shores, it is undoubtedly the Dowitcher, the bird which we are nicknaming the "Little Sewing-Machine." You notice that I did not say flushed from a certain spot, because this bird will not pay much attention to you—and will not fly from you before it is seen.

You can leisurely watch its performance, and you will be fascinated with the way it feeds. There it moves around rather slowly in the same muddy spot and rapidly jabs its long bill perpendicularly into the mud, feeding like a sewing-machine.

Good Clue
As I said before, this bird's habitat should give you a good clue to its identification, along with its very long bill. Whether it is in the spring, late summer, or fall, the Dowitcher also has a few plumage marks that are distinguishing: its lower back, rump and tail are white. Its white rump extends up its back in a long point.

In the spring its breast is washed with a cinnamon-red, as Roger Tory Peterson describes it; in the fall, its breast is light gray. In some sections of the country the Dowitcher is called Red-breasted Snipe because of its summer coloring; again it is called the Gray Snipe because of its winter coloring.

Often times the Dowitcher is in the company of other kinds of wading birds, called shore-birds or sandpipers, but its actions and bill will certainly help you find it. Don't forget that its bill is much longer, and that it pumps rapidly up and down like a sewing-machine.

Rocket Ranger Serial —

Century 21 Columbus

Chapter 3: Trip On Golla

Synopsis—After becoming somewhat familiar with the life of the Martian natives, some of the earth crew set off to investigate possible ruins near one of the canals.

As they raced across the desert Roy made a mental note that when regular flight was established between the earth and Mars, at the first opportunity he would have a Golla shipped back to earth for his personal use. "This beats horse-back riding by a mile," he shouted to Jack Baines who was reclining leisurely between two humps.

Wopang suddenly grunted and pointed. Coming up in the foreground was something that appeared to be a long, high wall, stretching across endless space. As they got closer they saw that it was nothing more than a dirt levee that loomed ten or more feet high.

The predominating purple and red colored plants of Mars grew thickly over the levee and at its outside base. Twenty feet from the levee, where the water supply no longer reached, the bleak sands of the desert were in evidence.

Wopang and Beloc tethered the Gollas by a clump of bushes while the earth men clambered to the top of the levee.

Amazing Sight
At the top they looked with amazement into a miniature-sized jungle! Trees, bushes, flowers, all were bundled together in a tangled mass, with the top of the jungle reaching a height of only four feet.

Dr. Wharton turned to Wopang who had remained below.

"Can we go into that land?" Doc shouted down.

"You go, we stay. Bad spirits! No happy!" spoke Wopang in his own language. Then he and Beloc squatted by the Gollas and began chewing on a handful of dried Mawga leaves. "Doc," said Max thoughtfully, "this levee wasn't moved here by the wind or any other force of nature. Some sort of life had to have a hand in the building of it."

"I agree with you, Max," replied Dr. Wharton, "and from the action of our native friends they certainly weren't the ones that are or were responsible. I'm sure we'll find the answer when we find the ruins."

Joe Higgins had been taking readings with instruments and after jotting down a few numbers estimated that the distance across the area enclosed by the levee they were on and the one on the other side was somewhere in the vicinity of thirty miles.

Lost Civilization?
"And, unless I miss my guess, we'll find the lost civilization of Mars somewhere between here and the other side," spoke Roy. "Let's get going. We're going to have to go on foot, so we might as well get started."

After calling down instructions to Wopang and Beloc who were still contentedly chewing Mawga leaves, the earthmen started down the levee side that entered into the purple-red jungle.

Traveling was slow, as dense growths had to be hacked out of the way. They could hear signs of animal life, but saw nothing more than the shadowy flight of a Martian bird, or the recently bent-over grass where a Martian animal had beat a hasty retreat.

They moved along in single file, Roy in the lead, with Max Bottomley bringing up the rear. Jack Baines, next to last, turned around to say something to Max. To his horror he saw something behind him.

"Max," he screamed, "look out, coming at you from behind!"

Blow 'Em Ashore

By D. W. Hendrickson

Part 2: Boys In Danger

Jim Davidson, seaman first class in the United States Coast Guard hopes for action as third man on the helicopter crew when he hears the alarm. He receives permission to go to the lookout tower, and races up to the top.

In the tower room he borrowed binoculars from one of the men on duty, and stared in the direction the lookout had his glasses trained.

But he couldn't see anything—at least not anything to warrant an alarm. Of course there was the surf boat pulling out with its oars rising and falling in perfect rhythm. And there was a small square darkish patch of something in the shallow bay a mile or two west of the Coast Guard station, but that was all.

"I don't see a thing," said Jim. "Well, if you're looking for a four-masted schooner, you won't," said the lookout without taking his eyes from his binoculars. "It's a raft with a couple of kids on it."

So that grayish square was it after all. Yes, now, as Jim trained his glasses more accurately on it, he could even see the figures of two children on the raft.

"No use hoping they'll need the copter for this job," he said. "I could rescue them with a canoe." He continued to watch the raft, and he was glad it was in the bay, instead of out in the open water. There the water was really rough, and it wouldn't take much of a blow to upset the little raft.

Dangerous Spot
It was rough enough in the bay, and if it upset—Jim shook his head. Although the children were not far from shore, it was a man's and not a kid's job to make it against the rising waves and the fierce undertow.

An American Every One Should Know

Ottmar Mergenthaler

By Walter B. Hendrickson

No country in the world except the United States has such large newspapers with so much for every reader—everything from comics to the latest news flash. Our great city newspapers publish several editions a day, and even small-town newspapers can print several thousand copies of their daily editions in a very short time.

America is a nation of newspaper readers. All this has been made possible largely by the invention of the linotype machine by Ottmar Mergenthaler in 1884.

Ottmar Mergenthaler was born in Germany but came to America in 1872 when he was just 16 years old. He landed in Baltimore and went to Washington D. C., where he had a job waiting for him. As a boy Ottmar had shown great aptitude for mechanics, and he had been apprenticed to a watch and clock maker, and so it was in the instrument making shop of August Hahl the son of his former master in Germany, that young Ottmar went to work.

He was a very successful machinist, with a quick understanding of how to translate mechanical ideas into machines.

Among other work that Mergenthaler did in Hahl's shop was to try to improve a machine that would set type. While this device was never successful, Mergenthaler did learn that there was a great need for such a machine.

Slow Work
Type for books, magazines and newspapers was all set by hand, with the typesetter picking up each single lead letter from its little compartment in the case and putting it in a composing stick. Mergenthaler became a partner with August Hahl, and they moved their busy shop to Baltimore, but all the time Ottmar was planning and thinking about a typesetting machine. Finally he left Hahl and opened his own shop where he could concentrate on his problem.

What Mergenthaler finally invented in 1884 was the linotype machine, which has a keyboard something like that of a typewriter. An operator presses the keys that releases hot lead into molds (matrixes) that form letters.

The letters are cast into a single line of type, and the make-up man in the print shop takes the line of type and locks them up in a frame (chase). Sometimes pages are printed directly from the type, but for newspapers, a stereotype, or lead sheet is made from the type, and this is put in a rotary press, and many thousands of copies can be made in a short time.

Would you like to see Ottmar Mergenthaler's invention? Ask your den mother or school teacher (or the adult leader of some other group to which you belong), to call the Jacksonville Journal Courier and arrange for a trip through the printing department, where several linotype machines work to bring you the Junior Journal Courier.

The Tommy Turtles' Adventure Game

By Emma Mae Leonhard

Chap. 1: Betty Butterfly

Whenever September comes, boys and girls go to school, some for the first time and some for the last time. It's in school that they learn how to live better, how to work better, and how to play better.

But Tom Turtle didn't have a school to send his seven little tommyes to.

Although he didn't have to worry about their work or their play, he knew that they should learn to live better. How could they?

There were no turtle schools. There were no turtle books. There were no turtle teachers.

Tom had been worrying about this school problem for days. How could his little Tommys learn what they needed to know? Then all of a sudden he had an inspiration.

The world would be the school for his seven little Tommys to learn in. He would send them out to seek adventures of their own. The world was the best school anyway.

Another Worry
Then Tom began worrying again. What if one of his little Tommys wouldn't go out into the world on an adventure? What would he do then?

He knew that if a turtle didn't want to learn, he wouldn't learn much. How was he going to get the seven little Tommys to want to learn?

And then Tom had another inspiration. He would make going out into the world a game, a game of adventure. These little turtles would seek adventure in the world until he called them back home. Then each one would tell his best adventure and what he had learned from it. The turtle that learned the most would get a prize.

Since it was already September, Tom decided to get busy right away. First, he had to call the seven little turtles together to explain the game of adventure. Since he had so much to land, he didn't want to go after them himself.

Just then Betty Butterfly happened to fly past him and perch herself upon a water lily near by. He recognized her as the butterfly that had a ride on his parasol. Maybe she would do something for him.

Calls Betty
"Betty," called Tom, "do you like to fly errands?" Tom had to say "fly" instead of "run" because she was a butterfly.

Betty moved her brown and yellow wings up and down thoughtfully. Then she asked Tom, "What kind of errand?"

"It will be fun for you, Betty. Just fly around and look for my seven Tommys. Tell them to come home right away."

Betty started out right away. She wondered what these little turtles had been doing.

She hoped that they weren't in some trouble. If they were, though, she would find out what it was. She loved excitement.

SPACE BOATS

By Walter B. Hendrickson Jr.

As well as space ships and space stations, there will be space boats.

These space boats will be used for travel between space stations and for moving objects too large for men to carry around in the space station's orbit. That is, too large for a man to handle since one would not actually carry things in the weightless conditions in outer space.

These space boats would have no stream-lined at all. As we have explained earlier, none would be needed since there is no atmosphere to be pushed through as there is on and near earth.

No Gravity
The space boats will use lower-powered motors than the space ships, because they don't have to work against any gravity nor accelerate to any great speed. Some of the smaller space boats may be only an open framework with small rockets attached.

The first inter-orbit space boat may be the last stages of ship's rockets with their streamlining removed. Since lots of space boats will be needed when space travel becomes popular, a factory must be constructed in outer space to build them.

Next, we'll tell you about the Space Lift.

Nine Big Indians

Part 4: Indians Leave

I heard grunts and pussy-footing before sun-up. Sure enough the Indians were leaving.

In the pale day-break I could see them, tall, each just like the other, blankets, feathers and all, erect, single-file, stepping off the last log step, on down the path to the gate held shut by a keg on a chain, then to the wood's edge through the lengthening daylight. They kept that tom-tom rhythm, (one could feel it), right into the forest, that shut them from sight like a curtain.

We children were busy with our chores all day. Toward evening we took the path to the woods and sat along the rail fence of the pasture waiting for father.

The sun was setting. How we wished father would get here before dark.

Just then we saw movement. No, not father's wagon and oxen. A lone man came walking. Could father have... Oh...

Another Indian
Just then Zeke said, "It's an Indian!"

We watched fearfully. The wood-road curved at the wood's entrance. One Indian after another began to appear. One, two, three, four... NINE BIG INDIANS.

I thought of all those sharp knives. Now we were to be scalped! But the Indians were surrounding a tree, the tree at this edge of the corduroy road over which father would come.

We watched breathlessly. The Indians began lifting and tying a large creature to a limb of the tree.

"Oh!" I almost sobbed out loud. "What if it's Father!"

"It's an animal!" said Zeke. Jerry said, "It's a bear." Thomas said, "It's a deer." "Oh!" Now I relaxed as we watched one Indian skin the beast.

He peeled down the great dark skin, heavy dark fur. We watched Indian after Indian whet his knife and then cut a thick hunk of meat from the beast. The ninth Indian had cut his piece!

Then the nine big Indians started to walk toward us. Their grunts were happy. Their step was quick.

They were way yonder. We jumped down. We children slipped along our secret path and beat them to our house.

"Mother!" we called. "Mother, the Indians are coming!"

"Oh!" said mother with a catch in her voice. But she went out on the breeze-way as they were entering and she smiled. We children were right around her there, and she smiled at each Indian who stepped up onto the log-step to enter. An old wrinkled, grumpy Indian came first.

He came over to Mother, and gave her a gift. Each Indian had brought a gift.

This head Indian walked to Mother and put into her hand a great dripping slice of meat. The next Indian did the same.

Mother thought quickly. She gave the two steaks to Zeke. She gave each new gift of dripping meat to one of us as she received it.

When the last Indian gave his piece of meat to her she already had a big bloody piece in each hand, for there were only six children and the baby.

Jerry stepped up and took the steak from the last Indian.

At once, the nine big Indians, blankets, feathers and all, began to grunt the most satisfied rhythm. To it, they single-filed down the log step, out and on, as far as we could see, into the forest.

Father Comes

Father arrived after dark. Supper was about ready. No biscuits, but a pone of corn-bread was ready to bake. Mother baked it after Father came. Over the coals she broiled nine bear steaks.

"The best supper I ever ate!" declared Father.

We children were so excited telling Father all that had happened that we almost forgot to eat.

"I am glad you were brave," Father said.

"And KIND," said Zeke, for all of us.

The End

BUYS MANHATTAN

The Dutch landed on Manhattan in 1624 (4 years after the Pilgrims came to Plymouth).

Peter Minuit, the Dutch leader, bought Manhattan for the Indians for trinkets worth $24.00.

QUARTET OF VETERAN BURGEOO MAKERS

FOUR MEN who know the ins and outs of burgoo soup making are shown in the photo above as they worked away Thursday evening at the annual Arcadia picnic.

In this part of the good old U.S.A., burgoo soup paddies and burgoo ladies are family heirlooms. They're handed down from father to son and it would be interesting to know who has the oldest paddle and the oldest ladle.

Shown in the photo, clockwise, are Elmer Holt, who has been helping at the Arcadia burgoo for about 15 years; Frank Ogle, who has been at it for 28 years; Russell Hymes, Arcadia soupmaker for the past six years and he can't remember when he started stirring and "helping out," and Cecil Wegehoff, who has been "doing what I can" for the past 15 years.

That all adds up to quite a few years — and a lot of soup.

OUTLOOK MEETING HERE THURSDAY

The annual fall outlook meeting will be held at Farm Bureau hall at 7:30 p.m., standard time, Thursday, Sept. 5.

Farm Adviser E. H. Garlich says representatives of the U.I. College of Agriculture and the St. Louis livestock market will be on hand to discuss livestock numbers, feed supplies, marketing prospects and the economic outlook.

All Morgan county farmers are invited to attend.

Historic Scene At Arcadia Burgoo

THIS SNAPSHOT records a historic scene. It shows Fred Bailey as he said he had enough to eat at the Arcadia burgoo Thursday evening.

As usual, Bailey was eating with the cooks.

He took a look at the long chow line and said he had enough. This practically floored his auditors: Merrill Masten, at left, who looked straight forward in an attempt to figure it out, and it caused Lark Buck, an old hand at the soup kettle, to scratch his head.

Bailey is a retired Jacksonville mortician and famed trencherman.

It is said a church youth organization set back their chili supper a day when they learned he would be in Chicago at a convention on the previously set date. It is also said that they did very well—since he showed up on the postponed date and ate six bowls of chili and four pieces of pie.

After this picture was taken one of Bailey's friends explained it all.

He said, "Fred knew that the last kettle was going fast and that some of the late comers wouldn't get fed. So he curbed his appetite and, so, the last five or eight people in the line who got soup to-night should thank Fred."

BEATING THE ELEMENTS—New methods of harvesting grain have wrought a revolution on Canada's wheat farms. Fields dotted with golden shocks of wheat ripening in the sun—once the picturesque trademark of the prairies—are now rarely seen. Instead, most farmers harvest their grain like Saskatchewan's Ed Schiefel, above. The wheat is cut and left lying in "swathes" to ripen on the ground, right. There is less chance of it being affected by wind, rain and hail, which can destroy a crop overnight. "Swathed" wheat ripens in about half the time it would require if left standing.

QUEER BIRDS

If you've ever shopped around for a car, you know there are a lot of different kinds of salesmen, and some mighty queer birds among them, too.

No one has ever tried to classify them before. So, like the Audubon Society that protects our birds of the field, I'm forming an Auto-bon Society to classify the queer birds of the car lots. Here are some types you may recognize!

SHARP-EYED PRICE PUSHER: Distinguished by rapid chatter, eliminating possibility of asking questions, on clear spring day can be heard repeating price incessantly; avoids mentioning cracked engine block, tattered upholstery.

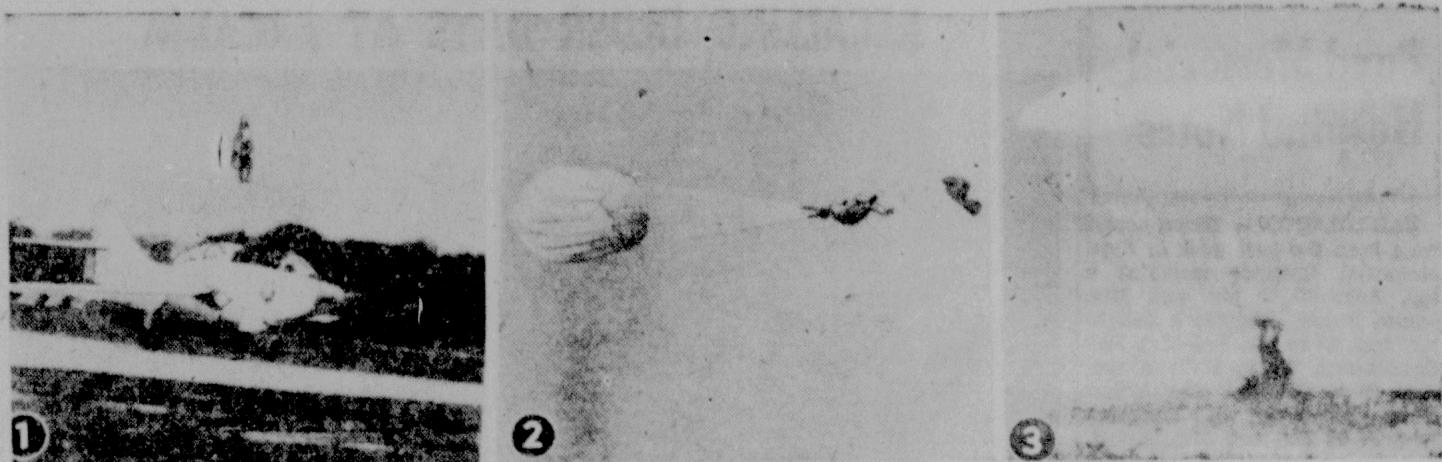

QUICK-FLAPPING MANAGER-CHECKER: Recognizable by confidential conspiracy he forms with client to outwit great enemy known as sales manager; confides he will attempt to black-jack the orgie into letting you buy this precious little car.

BACK-SLAPPING BUDDY (TAN): Usually distinguishable by yellow shirt, check jacket, mid-winter tan; can be heard in next county telling of last holiday, golf game, fishing trip, traffic tie-ups, coming storm, wife's toothache, kid's bruise — anything but automobile being inspected. Client buys car in order to change the subject.

You will notice that none of these varieties of birds know the slightest thing about cars. That's why we don't hire them. But I think customers should know about these amazing birds, and should meet some of them personally. Then, after you've shopped around at other places, come see us. Our salesmen have to know the facts of the cars they're demonstrating; they give you frank answers on trade-in and price.

Almost inevitably, it's the best deal for miles around. Take the fully equipped 1954 Mercury we have on our lot right now, for example. A handsome car for family service and only $1295.00.

UP AND OUT—This three photo sequence shows RAF Flight Officer Sidney Hughes in a test of a new Grumman low altitude ejection seat at Patuxent, Md. In photo No. 1 he blasts himself out of the plane as it leaves the runway at 130 miles per hour. He is catapulted about 80 feet into the air. At this point his parachute opens (photo No. 2) and he leaves the ejection seat. Photo No. 3 shows Hughes hitting the ground to successfully complete the test. Asked about his reactions in the test, Hughes said: "I'm a bit winded." The Navy has ordered 50 jet trainers equipped with the new seats.

The expression "to throw in the sponge" originated in the boxing field. At one time, if a fighter was unable to begin the next round, his seconds signaled the end of the bout by tossing his sponge into the ring.

BREAK OUT
COLUMBIA, S. C. (AP)—The two Columbia boys had red faces. After inviting friends to a housewarming at their new apartment they found the high latch to the only entrance was on backwards. One guest had to climb out a window to let the other guests out.

MAPPING THE DEFEAT OF POLIO—The remarkable success of the continuing campaign against polio is shown on Newsmap above. From U.S. Public Health Service data, it shows, by states, the number of cases up to the week ended Aug. 17, 1957, compared to the same period in 1956, which ended Aug. 18. This year's great reduction is spotlighted in the totals—only 3,217 in 1957 against 7,073 last year. Particularly heartening is the sharp drop in cases of paralytic polio—only 1,054 this year. Last year we had 3,381. Not all states showed a reduction this year. Statistics which include all types of polio show that 1957 brought increases—mostly slight—in South Dakota, Nebraska, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, New Mexico and the District of Columbia. In the last, there were 13 cases, contrasted with only three in 1956. Texas, with 543, had the largest number of cases this year, but in the same 1956 period, it had 864. Included in the total for the United States are two cases each in Alaska and Hawaii, an encouraging drop. In 1956, they had 8 and 56 respectively. Also included is Puerto Rico's 1957 toll of 21 cases against 34 cases in 1956.

Jerseyville Group Attends 'Pajama Game'

JERSEYVILLE — Seventy-four Jerseyville people attended the presentation of "Pajama Game" at the St. Louis Municipal Opera under the sponsorship of the Jerseyville Woman's Club Monday evening. The group went by chartered bus. This is the annual opera trip sponsored by the club and townspeople are privileged to accompany the club members.

The visit and picnic at Marquette Boys' Home at Pere Marquette Park this week under auspices of the Woman's Club was most interesting. Following the potluck meal the guests were taken on a tour of Lincoln Lodge. Prentiss D. Cheney of Jerseyville gave an instructive talk on "Indian Lore" and had with him a collection of artifacts for display. The boys of the Home entertained the group with several choral numbers.

Squirrels Damage Corn
A number of Jersey county farmers having corn fields adjacent to wooded creekland areas reported this week that squirrels are doing much damage to the maturing corn in a number of localities.

The animals climb the corn stalks to the largest ears and begin cutting the husks away with their teeth until the succulent grains are reached. The squirrel will eat from the ear until his appetite is appeased. When hunger strikes again, he will seldom return to the same ear of corn, but will select another stalk of corn and another choice ear.

RECALLING OLDER DAYS AT ARCADIA

THE LAST TWO charter members of the Arcadia Anti-Horse Thief association spent part of Thursday afternoon and evening remembering earlier days.

The society was organized by "15 or 20 men" back in 1913.

Charles Ogle of Concord, left, will be 88 years old on Nov. 22. His junior associate, Ellis H. Thompson of rural route 1, Jacksonville, will be 77 on Sept. 17.

Ogle recalled that he was the chairman of the first A.T.A. burgoo committee, back in 1918. In recent years the A.T.A. has united with the Arcadia Woman's club to put on the annual affair.

"We couldn't get along without the women," Ogle declared.

The Anti-Horse Thief association changed its name to the Anti-Thief association when the horses went out. But some of the older men say horses, especially the ponies and saddle breeds, are coming back and if they get numerous, and start to get swiped again, maybe the association will resume its old name.

Memorial Books At Jacksonville Library

Among the Memorial books presented to the Jacksonville Public Library is one which will be of particular interest to people in Jacksonville since the compiler was born in Jacksonville. Elizabeth Sweeney Patterson has collected Poems on Saint Francis of Assisi from 1200 A.D. to the present and published them in an attractive volume, entitled "Saint Francis and the Poet." The preface is by Richard J. Cushing, D.D. and the book is dedicated to the Right Reverend Monsignor Francis Frederick Fornaz. Miss Helen Sweeney has presented this as a Memorial to her niece Joann Marie Gillette.

The Happy Hour Sunday School Class of the First Presbyterian Church has presented "The Prophet and King" by Shirley Watkins in memory of Mrs. Mary Coultas.

The Great Books Discussion Group has given two books, "The History of American Church Music" by Leonard Ellinwood in memory of Mrs. Mary B. Coultas and "For Some Stringed Instruments," a book of poems by Peter Kane Default, in memory of Mrs. Lillie Leonhard.

Also in Memory of Mrs. Leonhard is "A Swinger of Birches," a
